Father, Son Complete Spartan Race

BY DALTON WALKER O'odham Action News dalton.walker@srpmic-nsn.gov

Teeling euphoric even with his cut-up knees shaking from near-exhaustion, 31-year-old Zachariah Miles crossed the Spartan Race finish line knowing he left everything he had on the course.

The Spartan Race is an endurance and obstacle race series with events held around the world. Various levels exist, including the Spartan Sprint and the Spartan Super. Both children and adults have their own races. The Spartan Arizona Sprint and Super Weekend was held at the Fort McDowell Rodeo Grounds on February 9 and 10.

To make completing the race that much sweeter, Miles had crossed a different finish line earlier that day along with his 9-year-old son, Zariah, who had just completed the Spartan Kids race. Zachariah ran the kids' course with Zariah, who was celebrating his birthday that weekend.

The father-son duo had been training for the race for months. The course was packed with challenges like mud pits, lifting obstacles and climbing walls. Zachariah completed the Super race course, a grueling 9.1-mile, 29-obstacle course, in three hours and 35 minutes, faster than his four-hour goal. It only took Zariah 24 minutes to complete the 1-mile, 12-obstacle kids' course. Zariah and his mother, Jackie, waited and cheered for Zachariah to finish.

"It was mentally challenging to go the distance, to conserve energy and not burn out too soon," Zachariah said. "It was an experience to utilize the whole body, a complete body challenge."

"It was fun and overall some of it was really, really hard, like going over hills with sandbags,

The Salt River Eagles girls' basketball team ended an exciting season with a second-place finish in the Canyon Athletic Association Division 1 Arizona State Tournament.

The Eagles went 12-0 in the regular season and 2-0 in the state tournament as the top seed before falling to undefeated and second-seeded St. John Paul II

Catholic, 65-39, on February 18 at Talking Stick Resort Arena in downtown Phoenix.

The game was close through most of three quarters, but Salt River never led and basket attempts to either tie or take the lead kept rolling out. The Eagles were down 33-30 with just under three minutes left in the third quarter before St. John Paul II Catholic went on a run, leading by 14 after three quarters.

February Snowstorm Reaches SRPMIC

You don't see snow on a cactus everyday. A cactus in Fountain Hills.

A snow covered mountain off Bush Highway in the nearby Tonto National Forest.

A lonely snowperson along the side of the street in Fountain Hills. Part of the community was covered with snow.

BY DALTON WALKER

O'odham Action News dalton.walker@srpmic-nsn.gov

late-February winter storm that dumped two to three feet of snow in parts of Arizona left its fingerprint in the Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community.

On the morning of February 22, a dusting of snow was seen on the top of sacred Red Mountain and snow covered nearby areas north and east of the Community, including the Fort McDowell Yavapai Nation, Fountain Hills and northern Scottsdale. In fact, the snow shut down the Beeline Highway (State Road 87) at Bush Highway in the Tonto National Forest just northeast of the Community.

Along with the snow came a cold streak unlike the Phoenix area has felt since 1897, when a high of 54 degrees was recorded, according to the National Weather Service. On February 22, the high temperature was 47 degrees, 40 degrees lower than the record high of 87 recorded in 1982.

For the most part, steady rain more than 40 inches overand brief hailstorms affected the Community. Scottsdale received almost two inches of rain over this time.

Visible from Phoenix, the McDowell Mountains, Four Peaks and Superstition Mountains were covered with snow and revealed a late-season beauty over the next few days.

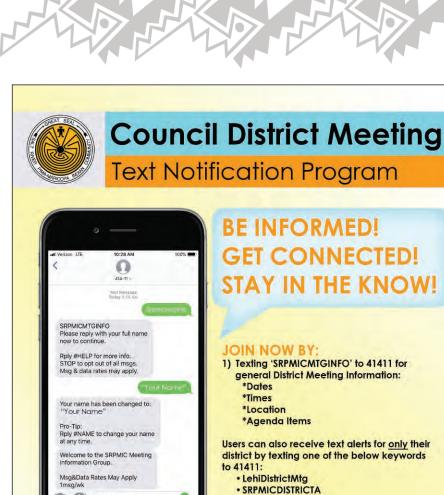

Arizona's high country received a record amount of the white stuff. The Flagstaff Airport reported 33 inches of snow on February 21 alone and all, according to the weather service. Payson received 23 inches of snow. Many school districts affected by the snow announced closures. Snowfall even accumulated in the Tucson area and on the Tohono O'odham Nation.

A few days later, the Valley was back in the 70s for the high as normal late-February temperatures returned.

Former First Lady Michelle Obama Visits Gila River Indian Community

In Phoenix for her book tour, former First Lady Michelle Obama visited the Gila River Indian Community in what was billed as a surprise visit on February 12.

Obama met with Governor Stephen Roe Lewis and a group of Gila River youth at the Huhugam Heritage Center, near Wild Horse Pass Hotel and Casino, for a roundtable. The visit was part of Obama's "Reach Higher" initiative, encouraging students to pursue postsecondary education.

Later that night, Obama appeared at a sold-out Comerica Theatre in Phoenix to talk about her bestselling book "Becoming." For more details about Obama's time in Gila River, visit www.gricnews.org.

Heard Museum Crowns 2019 World Championship Hoop Dancers

With thousands of dollars in prize money on the line, four hoop dancers were crowned this year's world champions.

The popular Heard Museum World Championship Hoop Dance Contest, which attracts hundreds of spectators and top hoop dancing talent from across Indian Country, was held in Phoenix in February. Four champions were announced for each of the event's four categories. Cody Boettner (Creek) was crowned the Adult world champion, Lane Jensen (Diné/Maricopa) was the top Senior, Nanabah Kadenehii (Diné) was named Teen champion, and Kailayne Jensen (Diné/Maricopa) was crowned Youth champion.

Top prize for the adult category was $3,500. For a full list of winners and additional information on the event, visit www.heard.org/event/hoop/.

'Predators on the Reservation' Premieres on

A journalistic collaboration by PBS "Frontline" and The Wall Street Journal, "Predator on the Reservation" tells the chilling story of an Indian Health Service (IHS) doctor sentenced to prison for sexually abusing Native American children.

The episode premiered in February and is available to watch for free online.

Pediatrician Stanley Patrick Weber was sentenced to more than 18 years in prison for abusing boys on the Blackfeet Indian Reservation in Montana and the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation in South Dakota for years.

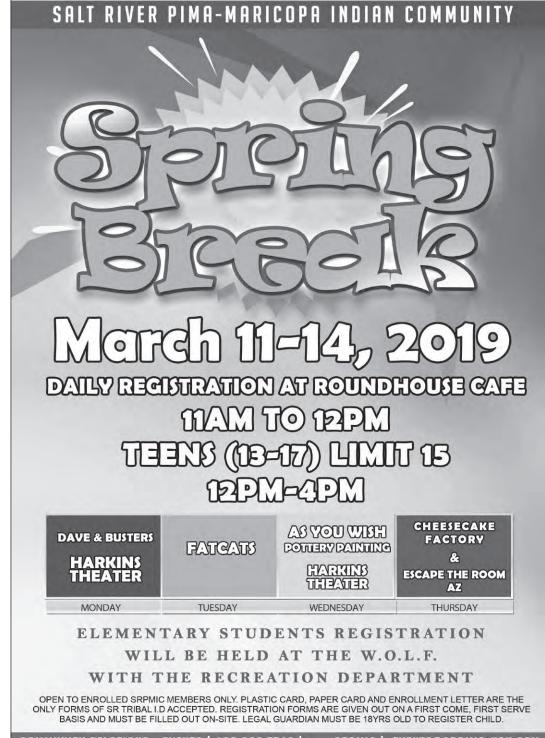

The roughly 55-minute episode is available to watch at www.pbs.org/wgbh/frontline.

The Salt River High School Senior Class has been holding a number of fundraisers to earn money for their senior trip to Six Flags Magic Mountain and Griffith Observatory in Los Angeles, California. On Saturday, February 23, the students held a bingo and food-sale fundraiser at the Lehi Community Building. The students already raised money to cover their stay at a villa located in the Hollywood Hills and will hold a few more fundraisers to pay for theme-park tickets, food, gas and spending money for each student. "We would like to thank our parents and the Community for coming out and helping to support us, and the parents for cooking and cleaning up at our fundraisers," said SRHS senior Keanna Osif. "Big thank-you to Ashley Howard, Marie Thomas, Darla Thomas and Gwen Osif for all their hard work in helping us at these fundraisers." Piipaash Matasheevm Committee Seeking Tamarack Tree Wood for Traditional Cremations

BY TASHA SILVERHORN
O'odham Action News
tasha.silverhorn2@srpmic-nsn.gov

Recently, the Piipaash Matasheevm Committee in the Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community met to discuss issues regarding traditional cremations, namely the firewood needed to perform the ceremony.

There was a lot of discussion regarding traditional cremations and how many have forgotten the traditional ways and process.

In the past, the older members of the Community knew the importance of the tamarack tree and what the wood was needed for, and they would give permission to take from their land whatever wood was needed, or at least offer some of their trees. Now many of the older members have passed on, and the new generation now residing in those homes with tamarack trees doesn't understand why people are asking for the wood, which means members must go elsewhere to get the wood.

The Committee wants to get the message across about the need for harvesting tamarack trees to supply wood for traditional cremation ceremonies. Mainly dry wood is used; in some cases, it can take up to one year to dry out the tree once it is cut.

"Right now, it's getting hard. We had cremations [scheduled] back-to-back, and the Public Works Cemetery Crew was there to help us gather wood from Ft. McDowell Yavapai Nation. We brought enough from there to take care of those cremations. But now we're out [of wood] and what we have left is green, so we have to wait for it to dry out," said committee member Derwin Washington. "We [men from the Committee] are willing to come and trim up the tree or cut it all down. We are willing to do that as soon as possible. We can have the bulk of the wood stored at the Lehi Cry House to dry [so it will be] ready for future cremations."

Currently it's difficult to gather wood on allottees' land because all landowners must give approval to cut down trees on the land. However, if it is on a specific allottee's land, the landowner can donate wood or the whole tree.

The committee explained the do's and don'ts of the cremation ceremony, and what was expected.

According to Ron Carlos, curriculum development specialist with the SRPMIC Cultural Resources Department, there are two reasons why the Piipaash (Yuman tribes) originally cremated their dead. In the Creation story there are twin brothers; one dies, and he is cremated and wants the people cremated like him. The second reason why cremation is done is because you can't go to the next life if you're not cremated; buried people and cremated people don't go to the same place, and that's why we are cremated, to be with our family who were also cremated.

Today, the younger generation knows little about the process of the traditional cremations, and there are only a few men left who continue the tradition and struggle to continue to do the process alone.

Community elder Ronald Mack shared that when he was growing up he would accompany his father, who was from Gila River's District 7, for cremations. He explained that mortuaries were not used back then; the women would clean the body and prepare it for the cremation process, and the men would prepare the grave and the materials needed for the cremation. This was done in one day, and the next morning the body would be cremated.

Today few people come out and help, and most don't understand that it takes a lot of work from the extended families and friends of the person who has passed on.

"Traditional cremations also cost more money because you have to buy blankets and provide food to all those who help during the whole process," said committee member Eddie Vest. "Materials needed for the cremations can cost from hundreds to thousands of dollars. A long time ago, families used to know what to bring—you wouldn't have to ask, they would just be bringing it. Today it's not like that."

The men stressed the importance of continuing the tradition and would like more people to come and learn the traditional cremation process and how to do it in a good, clean and pure state of mind. In the past they have experienced people wanting to come and take part in the traditional cremation while under the influence of drugs or alcohol, which is something that is frowned upon.

"The traditional cremations are not something to play with—you don't drink, do drugs, you drop all of that till after it's all over," said Mack. "When you're doing these things, you do it with a clean, pure heart; you don't have bad thoughts or anything like that."

The Piipaash Matasheevm Committee feels it's important for families to teach their children the traditional ways and explain that traditional cremations take hard work and support by family and friends. When doing a traditional cremation, there is a lot to learn and it just doesn't happen overnight. They explained that when there is a traditional cremation the people should rally for support and come learn how the cremation process is done so the tradition can continue in the future.

stuff you would lift, heavy stuff," Zariah said. "I was kind of nervous about the mud pit, but once I got in there and through it, I recognized it was really easy."

The Fort McDowell course is billed as one of the more complex courses on the Spartan Race calendar. "This event favors runners that can move quickly between obstacles and punishes those that take it for granted. Conquer the course here and you will have run across an area steeped in rich American culture and history," according to the Spartan Race website.

The Spartan Race wasn't on the Miles family's radar until only a couple

In 2014, Zachariah suffered a devastating hip injury as the result of a car crash. He couldn't walk for a couple of months and required a walker when he finally was able to try. He did physical therapy, and it helped, but the accident affected him mentally as well. He gained unwanted weight; after closing in on 200 pounds, he decided to make a drastic change thanks in part to a strength trainer he met while working out. The trainer motivated Zachariah to consider the Spartan Race.

Zachariah got serious in his workouts and nutrition in 2017. He lost 50 pounds while training and attending Scottsdale Community College, where he's studying business.

The countless cardio miles, push-ups, pull-ups, and kettle-bell squats were paying off. He gained needed strength and marked February's Super on his calendar. Meanwhile, son Zariah was working on the exercise ball, doing push-ups, and running and climbing at

"I felt a sense of appreciation for the mobility of my body, being able to heal to the point [where I could] participate in such an event, from going through physical therapy, not being able to walk, and not being able to care for myself to be able to do something I never imagined. It gave me a sense of confidence," said Zachariah.

Zachariah pointed to being O'odham, noting that his ancestors thrived on this land since time immemorial. He said he was meant to do the Super race, and the location of the course inspired him.

"This is our backyard, our tribal lands," he said. "It felt natural to be there; culturally, it's who we are. We were health-conscious people, fit, active. I want to emulate that."

Up next, the father-son duo is looking to compete in a similar race at State Farm Stadium in Glendale and perhaps a race in Las Vegas.

Finishing the Super "was really uplifting," Zachariah said. "It showed me what being disciplined and determined can do for you."

The Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community Cultural Resources Department hosted its last Winter Storytelling event for the season on February 21. O'odham elder and storyteller Barnaby Lewis from Blackwater, Gila River, led the storytelling presentation, which was held at the Community Building. Lewis explained the history of storytelling to a crowd of more than 40 adults and youth who came to listen. A light dinner was served while Lewis performed his stories. He would also sing in between, as well as translate from O'odham into English and back. He explained how many of the songs were derived from the traditional O'odham stories. The Salt River Police Department recently promoted dispatchers Mandy Vosburg and (R) Luisa Ika to the positions of Dispatcher II and SRPD Communications Shift Supervisor, respectively. SRPD Chief Karl Auerbach thanked both employees for their service to the department and explained how dispatchers are the lifeline to the SRPD officers as well as the public and do a professional job in a panicked situation. A celebration of the promotions took place on February 22 at the SRPD Osborn Road District Station with a brief ceremony, luncheon and cake. "I encourage you to both be the role model; hold yourself accountable to the highest standards and also our team," said Chief Auerbach. The chief read the biographies of both employees and presented them with certificates. Auerbach also mentioned that the SRPD dispatchers have earned emergency medical dispatcher certification. SRPD dispatchers are able to coach a person on the phone through steps to take in a medical emergency, such as performing lifesaving CPR or helping when a woman is going into labor. Community Member Pat Enos King Retires From ECEC

BY RICHIE CORRALES O'odham Action News richie.corrales@srpmic-nsn.gov

The Early Childhood Education Center (ECEC) at Salt River Schools held a special retirement celebration for language culture specialist Patricia King, who has been working in education for about 10 years.

The celebration took place on February 15, beginning at ECEC at the start of school and continuing later on that afternoon in the Education Board Room. King received gifts such as good luck charms, flowers, cards, a blanket, a shawl and an ECEC Cultural Language T-shirt.

Many Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community employees, coworkers and Council members stopped by to wish King a happy retirement and also to share their stories of her. O'odham songs that she sang to her classes every day played in the background.

When she started, "I always felt like I was by myself for a while teaching the youth O'odham [language], then within a few years we gained more staff to help," said King.

She explained that she and her colleagues had accomplished so much within a short time period, being able to come and work together and share ideas.

"It made me feel like I belonged somewhere with a purpose," she said.

That morning, the parents of all the kids she teaches came in and gave her hugs and took pictures, and they even sang to her.

"I was very fortunate to work with Ms. Patsy for five years, and how times flies!" said Cynthia Clary, assistant superintendent. "She has been one of the few people that has never altered her course; she has always been loyal and true no matter what has been going on at work or personally. She never lost her vision of her purpose here: to educate all the children of this Community. She is the perfect example of what we all strive to be when it comes down to how we work and how we care for this Community."

Cake with green frosting, King's favorite color, was served along with fruit punch.

"You will always be a part of Salt River Schools and someone who we all aspire to be," said Clary as everyone ate cake with King.

'We are thankful for your service. [King] said what was on her mind, and we also look forward to the lessons she will be giving us on the O'odham language and teaching some of the Council members how to properly introduce ourselves," said SRPMIC Council member Tom Largo.

Huhugam Ki Museum Cook Retires After 30 Years of Service

BY TASHA SILVERHORN tasha.silverhorn2@srpmic-nsn.gov

The Huhugam Ki Museum staff kept a secret from longtime employee Sharilyn Belone for six weeks: her surprise retirement party, which was held on February 15 at the Salt River Community Building. Guests included colleagues, family, friends and many of her longtime students.

Belone started working at the Huhugam Ki Museum in 1989 as a part-time employee who would come in and make the cemait (tortillas) for the Museum Kitchen's breakfast and lunch sales. Later, she became one of the full-time museum cooks. She and other Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community members would come in early to begin preparing food items that were staples of the Community to sell to hungry buyers for breakfast and lunch five days a

After working with the museum for 11 years, Belone had become one of the lead cooks and was the first one there to begin preparing the food to sell each day. She ran a tight ship as they transitioned from breakfast to lunch.

"Sharilyn has a good work ethic. She would have things planned out perfectly. It always impressed me how it magically went from one point to the next [working through the breakfast and lunch sales], and they did it with such ease—that's something that I always admired her for," said Thomas Jackson, museum assistant.

In 2004, the Huhugam Ki Museum was integrated with the SRPMIC Cultural Resources Department. As the SRPMIC government grew, and as construction of the Two Waters complex developed, the Museum Kitchen was closed and Belone's job duties changed.

"When the kitchen closed down, they gave her a desk and told her to begin to work on computers," said Jackson during his comments about Belone at her retirement party. "She turned to me and said, 'Tom, I have no idea how to do this.' We sat down and I showed her how to do things, and I said, 'I know you will get this.' She sighed and said, 'I hope so,' and not long after that she was emailing everyone."

During the party, a number of former and current co-workers shared the joys of working with Belone. They also noted her compassion and willingness to help educate people about making cemait.

"I know everyone appreciates you in our department, and it's going to be hard to fill the void when you are gone," said Cultural Resources Department Director Kelly Washington. "We're going to try to continue on with all the influences and teachings you have provided us with, and now it's our turn to step up and teach all those things you have taught us and pass it on to the next generation."

Belone was presented with several gifts from her department, SRPMIC Council and administration, and guests. The Huhugam Ki Museum presented her with a plaque that was engraved with her picture and a message.

The event continued with a performance from the Senior Steppers and ended with a dance featuring music by Gertie and the T.O. Boyz.

Medieval Times Marks Construction Milestone With Topping-Off Ceremony

BY TASHA SILVERHORN
O'odham Action News
tasha.silverhorn2@srpmic-nsn.gov

About 10 months ago, the Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community and Medieval Times Dinner & Tournament broke ground for the company's tenth North American castle. The 79,000-square-foot castle was originally scheduled for completion early this year, but the date has been pushed back to late July or early August 2019. On February 20, representatives from the SRPMIC, Medieval Times, and the architectural and construction firms gathered for the topping-off ceremony.

"Today at the topping-off ceremony, we bestow our hopes and blessings on this new building, on the land and on the many thousands of people who will visit and work at Medieval Times here in Scottsdale," said Medieval Times Creative Director Leigh Cordner as he opened the ceremony.

Cordner welcomed SRPMIC Council member Michael Dallas to provide the opening prayer. SRPMIC President Martin Harvier welcomed everyone to the topping-off ceremony and talked about the excitement surrounding this new development in the Talking Stick Entertainment District.

"It's really exciting to see the development. We get questioned all the time about the developments that are happening in our Entertainment District. We're always excited to announce that Medieval Times is going to be here," said Harvier. "It's also an exciting time for the landowners, who have been blessed with this land that has been passed down from their ancestors. It's not only a benefit for them, but also for their future generations to come."

Harvier also noted the excitement about the new job opportunities Medieval Times will bring, not only to the Community but to the Valley as a whole.

"Today we're putting the last steel beam on the building. The 120-foot-long steel beam is the largest beam in the arena," said Kevin Gadbury, general manager of Medieval Times Chicago. "We're getting to the point now ... that lot of the trades can keep working inside, which will make the [construction] progress go a little bit faster at this point."

Prior to the steel beam being raised into place, guest were invited to sign a large banner placed on the beam. Medieval Times also staged a mock jousting battle for guests' entertainment.

The Medieval Times Dinner & Tournament was founded in 1977 in Spain; the first United States castle opened in 1983. The dinner theater attraction provides a Medieval-style feast and jousting show. For more information, visit www.medievaltimes.com.

Open auditions and a model call for the play "Native Nation" took place on Wednesday, February 20 at the Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community's Two Waters Building.

"Native Nation" is a play-like work that interweaves four stories of Indigenous people. ASU Gammage commissioned the work from Cornerstone Theater Company. Playwright Larissa FastHorse (Lakota) and Cornerstone Theater Director Michael John Garces developed the script after spending the last year with local Indigenous people and organizations talking about the different topics facing Indian Country.

The Cornerstone Theater Company is based in Los Angeles.

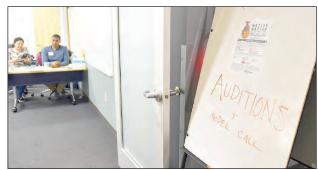

"Cornerstone is a professional, community-based theater company; we make plays about communities," said Michael Garcia, community engagement associate for the company. "About 75 percent of the cast are Native American, and we do our best to see that Native Americans are represented in every aspect in the show. We are looking for people who want to come be in a play and want to have a cool experience."

Auditions for "Native Nation" were held for Native cast members of all ages. The visit to Salt River was the third and final casting call. Other auditions were held at Steele Indian School Park and on the Arizona State University campus. Overall, 73 people auditioned, coming from tribal communities all over Arizona, including San Carlos, the Navajo Nation and the Tohono O'odham Nation.

The company was also looking for crew members to work in stage management, set design, sound and lighting, costume, makeup and other departments.

Cowboy Represents Community at Rodeo Events

BY RICHIE CORRALES O'odham Action News richie.corrales@srpmic-nsn.gov

leam roper Shea Darice Enos Sr. has been representing the Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community at many rodeo events around the state and country. Recently he has been getting serious about the sport, winning championships and also placing each time he participates along Enos grew up here on the Community, and currently he is a full-time heavy-equipment supervisor at Salt River Materials Group, which he's been doing for almost 20 years.

"I started rodeoing as a young boy," he said. "My dad taught all us kids how to ride horses and such. There used to be a lot of wild horses around the rez. When I was a kid, we would ride the horses to the canal, which back then was still made out of dirt, and we would jump off the horse's back into the water. Those were good times."

Riding the wild horses as a young child helped Enos learn how to control a horse. "We didn't have saddles, and sometimes we would fall off, but we would get back on," he said. "This is a lifestyle that is disappearing in our Community. We used to be a rodeo and ranching lifestyle community, and we used to have one of the biggest rodeos around, called the Trade Fair."

Rodeo grounds were located throughout the Community, including where the current Cultural Resources Building is located and another was in the area of McDonald and Pima roads.

Since he was a teen, Enos has done ranch work for his father in Fort Mc-Dowell, where there were tons of cattle. "My dad grew up in the Community and was into [ranching] since he was young, and he just passed it down to me. It's always been an interest of mine," said

Being around horses and cattle all his life, Enos always thought about taking his skills to a professional level, but life took him a different way and he chose family first. Years later, he began to pursue his passion of competing in team roping and breakaway roping.

He started getting serious about it when he was 22, traveling to different Indian communities to compete.

Currently Enos's nephews, Kaya Hayes, Trevor Waters and Ty Romo, are pecially if he is leading up to an event. They rotate among two or three horses for practice so horses don't get burned

Enos broke his ribs last November when dismounting his startled horse; it took a few weeks to heal. By the beginning of February, he was back participating in events, this time in a rodeo in

"I took part in the breakaway competition, where I won. It was a pretty good weekend for not competing in a while. Rodeoing is tough—you can get hurt or lose a thumb, but you find a way to get

"We used to be a rodeo and ranching lifestyle community, and we used to have one of the biggest rodeos around, called the Trade Fair." - said Enos so far the only Community members known to participate in rodeo events around the state and country, from team roping to bull riding.

Last year Enos made it to the Indian National Finals Rodeo in the senior division. He explained how you have to compete in a certain number of rodeos and be at the top of your region to be selected to go to the event by the end of "This year I had a chance to travel and win enough times to be selected to be part of the finals in roping," said Enos. "It's an interesting sport that not a lot of people know about. Being in rodeos doesn't come cheap; you have to buy a lot of equipment, trailers, food and gas to be in rodeos. It's not like you can just jump on a plane and get there."

There is a lot that goes into it. Practicing can take hours each week, and having the right horse is expensive to buy and maintain. Enos said at times he practices every day up to four hours, esaround your injuries," said Enos.

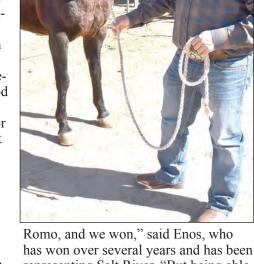

He added that it's a constant thing to work on your horse and your technique. He explained how you have to show the horse what their job is when the time comes. He and his team-roping partner practice on dummies set up in his back yard, and even his friendly pet goat.

The Indian National Finals Rodeo has 13 regional divisions nationwide.

'The INFR will start up in March for our region. We are the Southwest Region, and we go to all our regional rodeos, such as San Carlos and Holbrook for instance. We can participate in other regions as well, not just our own,"

The Four Nations Rodeo is an event that encompasses Salt River, the Gila River Indian Community, Ak-Chin Tribe and Tohono O'odham Nation. Competitors must be enrolled tribal members to

"I participated in a specific roping event with Ty Romo and also Jon representing Salt River. "But being able to win that Four Nations Rodeo was awesome.

In 1994 Enos won the biggest roping event at that time, competing against 600 teams. He and his friend Terry Doka placed third in that event and won $12,000 each.

"I have seen the growth with youth in other communities [participating in rodeo], and I hope to someday see the youth from Salt River take part in the events as well," said Enos.

"I want to let the Community know that we are representing them, but really there are only two of us from the Community. I feel that we need more of our people to get out there and compete, but it takes time to work on your skills and get up there. But overall, I'm glad to be representing us in other Indian communities. My sister Brandy Enos also participates and represents the Community as well as Fort McDowell," said Enos.

22 Tribes Take Part in the Arizona Indian Festival in Scottsdale

BY TASHA SILVERHORN O'odham Action News tasha.silverhorn2@srpmic-nsn.gov

The Arizona American Indian Tourism Association teamed up with the City of Scottsdale to present the 2019 Arizona Indian Festival in coordination with Scottsdale's Western Week in early February. The events of Western Week included not only the Indian Festival, but also Scottsdale's famed ArtWalk, the Hashknife Pony Express and the Parada del Sol parade.

The two-day Indian Festival featured Indian villages that presented the cultural traditions of the 22 tribes of Arizona, plus traditional food and entertainment. Each tribe shared its traditional foods, crafts, clothing and dwellings. On the entertainment stage, tribes performed their traditional dances, stories and songs, hoping to educate those interested in getting to know the different Native American cultures throughout Arizona.

The Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community shared a vato with the sister tribes, Gila River, Tohono O'odham and Ak-Chin. The Huhugam Ki Museum staff demonstrated tortilla making and set up displays of O'odham basketry and traditional Community artists set up displays and gave hands-on demonstrations, such as Piipaash pottery by Ron Carlos, shell etching by Jacob Butler, basket weaving by August Wood, and O'odham burden baskets and bow-and-arrow kits by Royce Manuel. Artists from other Arizona tribes showed off their painting, jewelry making, basketry and rug weaving.

From the Community, Bird Singing and Dancing by the River performed Piipaash dances. Other performers included deer dancers from the Pascua Yaqui Tribe, Zuni dancers, and Hopi and Apache dancers, just to name a few.

This event takes place each year after Scottsdale's Western Week in the beginning of February. To plan for next year's event, visit www.arizonaindiantourism.org/az-indian-festival-2018/.

24th Annual Unity Run Relay-Style March 17- 22, 2019

Unity Run Begins at Red Mountain

Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community Unity Run Coordinator, Meldon Fulwilder shared words of encouragement to the O'odham Council, Community members and (Sister Tribes, Gila River, Ak-Chin, Tohono O'odham and Hiecd O'odham) communities and villages who have supported, participated, provided and hosted the Unity Run in the past to the present.

This year will complete our commitment of going south for four-years. For some of the communities and villages it will be the last time; keep in mind that your solidarity and interest is very much needed to help bring awareness, to instill and strengthen the youth and O'odham about our Himdag (Way Of Life) and Ihmigi (Relationship).

The Unity Run's commitment is to bring together the youth and elders in a cultural exchange of prayers and respect to the communities and villages. We ask for your support, strength, blessings, prayers and sharing our history of the O'odham in our communities and villages.

On behalf of the Unity Run, thankyou for your help and assistance and the warm welcome we have received for the last 23-years. A 1,000 words of gratitude will never be enough to give thanks to our Community, your communities and villages.

Again, this year, approximately 200 individuals will be participating from beginning to end. In closing, "AS LONG AS THE MOUNTAINS ARE STILL HERE, WE 'O'ODHAM' WILL ALSO BE HERE," words dedicated to the elders, runners, and supports who has been in the Unity Run and are now in the "RISING SUN' (SPIRIT WORLD).

Donations are welcome such as water, Gatorade, gas cards, etc. Please call to find out how you can help.

Respectfully, Salt River Pima - Maricopa Unity Run

Great skill and talent were on display at Salt River High School at the Band Concert and Art Show on February 21. The event featured the high school band, junior high band and drumline. In all, more than 50 students participated the event, which was held in the lecture hall. Each musical group performed an individual selection before combining at the end to play one song as the finale. Photo courtesy of Salt River Schools. Dalton Walker, O'odham Action News.

ALA Arts Teacher Edith Eubank Finalists for Major Arts Award

SUBMITTED BY SALT RIVER SCHOOLS

Edith Eubank, art teacher and parent educator at the Accelerated Learning Academy for Salt River Schools, is a finalist for the Governor's Arts Award in the Arts in Education (Individual) category. She spoke to use about the award, her career in education, and why art is important for students to learn.

Tell us about the Governor's Arts Award and why you're a finalist?

This award recognizes educators, teaching artists, school administrators, or school volunteers that have demonstrated significant support and participation in activities that foster excellence in, appreciation for, or access to art education in Arizona. I am nominated, I believe, because I have challenged students to learn how art displays are created and the details of what goes into creating an interesting display that people can learn from while enjoying the works of the various individual artists.

What is your academic back-ground?

My masters is in counseling; however, I minored in art therapy and took visual art courses, including watercolor and drawing. I primarily studied special education with a focus on early education.

How long have you been an educator?

I have been an educator for more than 25 years, starting as a Head Start parent who worked her way through the ranks up to assistant director. I have had countless leadership roles within education; I even went to Tanzania, Africa, and taught early educational techniques and how to effectively communicate with staff. I have had the pleasure of working for SRPMIC and Salt River Schools the past seven years as a parent educator, and six years as an art teacher.

What are your core values when it comes to teaching art?

I aim to help art students build skills in self-confidence, critical thinking, communication, and peer cooperation skills. But most of all I want students to have fun in learning the various concepts, as well as the elements of art and the principles of design. I also encourage as much Community involvement as possible. For instance, I have invited Community members to share their talents in gourd-making, architectural design, and basket weaving to name a few. Also, students always enjoy touring the Heard Museum for the O'odham and Piipaash history and art works that are available.

Edith Eubank

Why is art important to teach students?

Art reaches all academic domains, including math, science, history, and English. Cross-curricular projects can be created for students to learn and continue to build critical thinking and problem solving skills while working within the arts. Art allows students—and everyone—to share their feelings, creativity, beauty, and opinions with others through a variety of mediums.

From the awards press release:

The 2019 Governor's Arts Awards will be presented Thursday, March 7, at the Renaissance Phoenix Downtown Hotel. Recently, organizers named 23 finalists for this year's awards, which will recognize significant achievements and contributions to Arizona arts and culture.

Finalists were announced on February 8 and were chosen from 59 nominees, who were assessed for their contributions and dedication to the arts, among other factors.

The awards are presented by Arizona Citizens for the Arts, in conjunction with the Office of the Governor. Arizona Citizens for the Arts advocates for arts and culture throughout the state. The annual awards, launched in 1981, have recognized more than 200 people to date.

Awards will be presented in several categories, recognizing contributions by individuals, organizations, businesses, community members, and philanthropists.
