New Residential Treatment Facility Breaks Ground

CHRISTOPHER LOMAHQUAHU

Christopher.Lomahquahu@srpmic-nsn.gov

A treatment facility with the mission to help people recover from addiction recently broke ground on the Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community. On May 9, SRPMIC leaders, Health and Human Services (HHS) staff and Community members currently in addiction recovery turned over loose soil to usher in the Journey to Recovery treatment facility on a patch of ground just west of the River People Health Center.

According to information on the project, "The Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community Journey to Recovery project is designed to provide a welcoming 'home-like' environment where Community members can receive treatment with privacy and dignity."

SRPMIC President Martin Harvier opened the event with a prayer and remarks. He recognized the Council members, community manager and assistant community managers present at the groundbreaking. President Harvier started with an analogy to the Man in the Maze symbol and Elder Brother. "Like Elder Brother, who sits at the top [the man in the maze] and who goes through life and hits roadblocks, sometimes in people's lives those roadblocks could be substance abuse or things that are making life difficult," said Harvier. He said the new JTR residential facility is meant to help Community members address those issues and not fall back on old harmful ways of dealing with life's challenges. President Harvier said, "There are [difficulties] that we are going to have in life, but going forward is how we will deal with them, and that is something we want to have for our Community members ... [something] we will look forward to each day, when it comes to healing." The treatment facility comprises 50,000 square feet and will house nearly 40 residential beds, 10 detox beds and three crisis stabilization beds for adult men and women. The facility consists of three wings connected by covered walkways. The construction will be a coordinated effort between the Community; general contractor Au' Authum Ki Inc.; DLR Group, which is providing the architectural design; and Kitchell

On May 12, the newly branded Talking Stick Resort Amphitheatre held an official ribbon-cutting ceremony to signify the name-in-title sponsorship and partnership between Talking Stick Resort and Live Nation. The 20,000-seat outdoor venue in west Phoenix was originally named Desert Sky Pavilion from 1988 to 1996, and it was most recently known as the Ak-Chin Pavilion before Talking Stick Resort, an enterprise of the Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community, secured the naming rights earlier this year. Ramon Martinez, director of public relations for Casino Arizona and Talking Stick Resort, said that he's excited for the partnership because the two entities are so much alike as entertainment destinations. "The fact that we can get our name out here, this is the most popular outdoor venue in Phoenix. So, whenever people come here and see our name, they're thinking entertainment, they're thinking music, and they relate to that, so I think it's a great partnership," Martinez said. Mike Berndt, senior vice president of venue sales at Live Nation Entertainment, shared that excitement, adding that the partnership has been a long time coming. "We were able to announce [the partnership] right after the

Leaders from the City of Tempe and the Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community met on May 8 to bolster relations between the two governments. SRPMIC and the City of Tempe hosted a council-to-council joint meeting at the Round House Café. "It is really good to have everyone here this evening, and I want to welcome everyone here for this important meeting," said SRPMIC President

Martin Harvier. He said the last time a meeting was held between the two governments was three years ago, before the COVID-19 pandemic. SRPMIC Council Representative Michael Dallas opened the meeting with a blessing, offering thanks for the opportunity to come together and share updates for each government since 2019. He asked that from this meeting the relationship between both governments would strengthen as they continue to work together.

Governor Hobbs Addresses Predatory Treatment Centers That Commit Fraud

SRPMIC President Harvier speaks at a press conference held by Governor Hobbs to address predatory behavioral treatment facilities on May 16.

O'odham Action News
Christopher.Lomahquahu@srpmic-nsn.gov

On May 16, Arizona Governor Katie Hobbs, Arizona Attorney General Kris Mayes and tribal leaders gathered at the state capitol for a press conference addressing the fraudulent billing practices of certain behavioral health treatment centers across the Valley.

“Today we are announcing actions against over 100 providers of behavioral health, residential and outpatient treatment services that we have credible reason to believe have defrauded the state’s Medicaid program of hundreds of millions of dollars,” said Hobbs in her opening address before the local media.

“It’s alleged that these providers target the most vulnerable people, offering them the false promise that they will be given food, housing, and access to treatment at a group living home or rehab facility. People are then left in these facilities without proper access to healthcare and treatment services.” Hobbs said many who were recruited to enter these treatment facilities were from rural tribal communities, who were then exploited and cut off from their families and loved ones. “People with nowhere to go and nobody to turn to are isolated by these organizations. People had to escape out of windows and jump over fences in the middle of the night just to access a phone to reach the outside world,” said Hobbs. Following Hobbs’ address, Mayes said, “Our new administration is taking aggressive action to stop fraudulent Medicaid billing practices by scam artists masquerading as legitimate behavioral health service providers.” She thanked Arizona’s tribal leaders for continuing to advocate for changes to “a system that allowed these alleged crimes to occur, harming vulnerable individuals and deceiving taxpayers.” Mayes said, “For very nearly three years, special agents and investigators at the Arizona Attorney General’s Office, the AHCCCS Office of Inspector General, and our law enforcement partners at the federal level have been investigating [these cases], indicting, pursuing financial remedies and attempting to disrupt these fraudulent bad actors.”

SRPMIC Council Representative Mikah Carlos was in attendance to support the state's efforts to combat fraudulent behavioral health treatment facilities from continuing to operate in Arizona.

of millions of dollars,” said Hobbs in her opening address before the local media.

Hobbs said many who were recruited to enter these treatment facilities were from rural tribal communities, who were then exploited and cut off from their families and loved ones. “People with nowhere to go and nobody to turn to are isolated by these organizations. People had to escape out of windows and jump over fences in the middle of the night just to access a phone to reach the outside world,” said Hobbs.

Following Hobbs’ address, Mayes said, “Our new administration is taking aggressive action to stop fraudulent Medicaid billing practices by scam artists masquerading as legitimate behavioral health service providers.”

The Arizona Health Care Cost Containment System, or AHCCCS, is Arizona’s Medicaid program.

How do these “bad actors” under the guise of behavioral treatment facilities work?

Mayes said, “Generally they began with fraudulent treatment facilities recruiting Native Americans, typically those residing on a reservation or part of the urban homeless population. These vulnerable individuals are incentivized to participate in ... ‘treatment’ at an outpatient clinic with offers of things like free food, cash incentives or free rent.”

Once they are recruited into a treatment facility, they are given a simple intake process through which the bad actors obtain personal information and their AHCCCS identification card. Mayes said, “If the potential patient was not yet eligible for benefits under the American Indian Health Plan, the fraudulent behavioral health facilities contacted AHCCCS [and then obtained] eligibility for the patient based on the unchallenged assertion that the patient was eligible for the plan simply by being Native American.”

Mayes added, “These scammers didn’t even bill AHCCCS for people they were in contact with; they simply purchased lists of names and dates of birth of people and used those to bill AHCCCS. They also billed for services that were impossible to render. In one case, we discovered that AHCCCS had been billed for more than 13 hours a day for alcohol rehabilitation services to a 4-year-old. This poor child was not in one of the facilities and did not need alcohol rehabilitation.”

Stories like these and countless others have been the backdrop for several instances where fraud and mistreatment have been present in these treatment facilities. Mayes said, “The human impact of this fraud is the most heartbreaking of all. While these scammers are using random ID’s to bill for millions of dollars worth of services, thousands of Arizonans are in real need” of services that are being wasted.

SRPMIC President Martin Harvier, who spoke at the press conference along with other tribal leaders and representatives, said, “This crisis is a direct result of the predatory practices of many behavioral health facilities that have targeted our tribal members who are most in need. I want to thank you personally for the hard work that you and your teams have done over the last couple of months to help tribes resolve this crisis.”

He said Governor Hobbs’ administration has been steadfast since taking office on January 2, which shows that her office is committed to not only recognizing the problem, but also directing state and federal agencies to act.

“Our community has established a team that includes members from our Department of Health and Human Services, our Community Development Department, our police department and our communication team who are all working to provide services to Community members that may be displaced [by these fraudulent treatment centers],” said Harvier.

He added that it takes a coordinated effort through communicating with the Federal Bureau of Investigation and local law enforcement to place crimes that may include missing and murdered Indigenous people on their watch list.

He also mentioned the Community’s own residential treatment facilities as places where Community members can obtain treatment without traveling off of tribal lands.

Carmen Heredia, director of AHCCCS, said, “We are working together in cooperation with our esteemed attorney general, Kris Mayes, as well as multiple agencies and law enforcement represented here today. First and foremost, ... we have to make sure that AHCCCS members can receive the services they need and deserve. To that end, we have instituted a hotline at 211 that will provide guidance for affected members when they have questions about their Medicaid services.”

A new website, www.211Arizona.org/MMIP, has been established to respond to any individual who feels they have been impacted by a fraudulent treatment center. Calling the 211 hotline can provide mobile crisis teams ready to deploy when members need hands-on, immediate behavioral health services, transportation or care coordination, and coordination of immediate housing, transportation and health services related to a provider’s closure.

Heredia added that her office is working to equip law enforcement agencies with guidance and materials to help any individual they may come into contact with who’s been targeted. In addition, AHCCCS has suspended payment to the 100-plus fraudulent treatment facilities and is developing a recommendation on how to further hold these parties accountable.

With a multifaceted approach, the state of Arizona, tribes and federal partners are addressing this issue to prevent more individuals from falling victim to predatory treatment centers.

Predatory Facilities Funding Cut

The state of Arizona is suspending payment to 100+ facilities in the Valley that may have been involved with predatory recruitment.

- Predatory Treatment Centers targeted Native Americans for rehabilitation.
- Cut funding may displace roughly 7,000 individuals.
- These individuals may be seeking housing and resources.
- They may be reporting that they were the victim of a crime.

Also, we are urging you to utilize the 2-1-1 Hotline set up by the State of Arizona to assist with transportation and emergency housing needs.

Leaders Who Share Boundaries Come Together to Discuss Projects

At top left, Tempe Vice Mayor Adams talks about the opportunity for the city to be invited to the SRPMIC lands. Bottom left, SRPMIC Community Manager Meyers provides an overview of the Community government organization. At right, Tempe Mayor Woods describes the importance of having the two governments come to the table and discuss future projects.

Tempe Mayor Corey Woods and Vice Mayor Jennifer Adams were present to preside over the meeting, along with staff from the city’s various departments. Representing the SRPMIC were President Harvier, Vice-President Ricardo Leonard and Council Representatives Dallas, Jacob Butler, Wi-bwa Grey, Deanna Scabby, Micah Carlos and David Antone. They were accompanied by Community Manager Bryan Meyers and Assistant Community Managers Blessing McAnlis, Carla Banuelos, Doran Dalton and Lena Jackson-Eckert.

Meyers reviewed the organizational structure of the Community and how each assistant community manager oversees a series of departments under their direction. He stated how the Community is structured into an executive branch, a legislative branch and its own judicial branch with judges appointed by Council.

The Tempe representatives provided an update on the Hayden Flour Mill redevelopment project at Rio Salado Parkway and Mill Avenue. The city plans to transform the historic mill and five acres of land into a mixed-use area that includes a new hotel, retail and restaurants, and a public park.

In another project for Tempe, the Tempe Historic Preservation Plan has been adopted by the city. The plan includes provisions for increased review, evaluation and consultation of new developments in areas that are of historical and cultural sensitivity to surrounding tribal communities. The plan allows tribes to weigh in with concerns about indirect effects that may be created by various projects. This includes recommendations from the SRPMIC, the Gila River Indian Community and the Pascua Yaqui Tribe on environmental sensitivity and how to mitigate such instances where remains or archeological sites are discovered.

The meeting concluded with a few closing remarks from Community and Tempe representatives, followed by an exchange of gifts.

Missing and Murdered Awareness Day Prayer and Walk

Scottsdale Community College hosted a Missing and Murdered Indigenous Walk and Prayer session in remembrance of individuals who have been the victim of a violent crime or are missing from their tribal community. The Scottsdale Community College Indigenous Cultural Center organized and hosted a Missing and Murdered Awareness Day Prayer and Walk on May 5 to remember Indigenous individuals who have been victims of violent crime.

Scottsdale Community College students, faculty and leadership were invited to take part in the morning’s events. Since the campus is situated on SRPMIC lands, Miss Salt River Nani Reina, who is a student at SCC, recited SCC’s land acknowledgement, which recognizes that the college sits on the ancestral lands of the O’odham and Piipaash and recognizes all those who carry on the traditions of the Community. She also stated that it is important for people to gather and pay their respects to those who have been injured or killed or gone missing.

SCC President Dr. Eric Leshinskie said the college is honored to have a partnership with the Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community. “We do all that we can to honor that relationship as stewards of the land,” he said.

He added that it is important to gather on days such as this one revolving around the MMIP epidemic, “to remember, to show our respects and to show that action can be taken to stand up to these challenges.” Leshinskie also said that with more awareness around such an important cause, the future will be more uplifting in knowing that people can stand behind MMIP awareness.

“We continue to want Scottsdale Community College to be a place where we can come together, no matter your beliefs or your faiths, your age or ethnicity ... we come together to learn and to grow,” said Leshinskie.

Ana Cuddington, manager of the Indigenous Cultural Center at SCC, said there is a disparity among ethnicities when individuals go missing. She said that all too often individuals of color who go missing do not get the same level of attention as those from non-ethnic backgrounds.

She said that it often takes families, tribal communities and grassroots efforts to bring awareness to the case of an Indigenous person who is missing. Cuddington added that it takes everyone’s effort to help in the case of a missing Indigenous person to ensure they are not forgotten, and, as with the morning’s event, to offer prayers for the missing individuals and their families.

Her remarks were followed by a few words by Michael Little Crow, an assistant professor at Arizona State University who is a member of the Turtle Mountain Anishinaabe-Cree people. Little Crow shared a story that hit close to home regarding his cousin, who was murdered over a pair of cowboy boots.

Little Crow said it is senseless crimes like these that show the fragility of life. “Life is already short; why do we have to shorten it?” said Little Crow on how life-changing actions can result from incomprehensible decisions.

Before the walk, Little Crow provided an opportunity for attendees to receive a smudging, which is the burning of sage to purify oneself to welcome and bring goodness to one another. He followed his remarks by playing the flute and singing a prayer song, which Little Crow stated is an expression of the heart and of emotion.

The walk commenced along the “Artie Walk,” a 1-mile loop around the SCC campus, and it concluded back at the Indigenous Cultural Center.

Office of Congressional & Legislative Affairs Launches Voter Survey

The Office of Congressional & Legislative Affairs is launching a survey of Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community members to learn about their voting patterns and what gets them to the polls on Election Day.

During the senior breakfast hosted by the SRPMIC Senior Services program on May 3 at the Talking Stick Resort, OCLA Intergovernmental Relations Project Manager Angela Willeford provided a brief presentation on the survey to the seniors.

"Last year was the Arizona election for governor and other positions ... we had a turnout of only 34%," said Willeford. She said there was an increase in promoting voter participation through a coordinated campaign for Community members, but there is room to improve.

To help boost voter turnout, one way is to understand how and why SRPMIC members vote.

Last year's "Get out the Vote" campaign implemented a door-to-door voter registration drive, an online portal to access information via a QR scan, and a comprehensive voter guide disseminated to the Community through O'odham Action News. The previous voter campaign also took advantage of current trends in Indigenous communities by using the tagline "SkoVoteDen," which was meant to attract younger voters.

"What better way than to ask our Community members what can we do better to make sure that our [voter] turnout for the next year is higher?" asked Willeford, noting that Americans across the nation will be heading to the polls for the next presidential election in 2024.

Resolution Copper Files Motion to Intervene on Oak Flat

BY CHRIS PICCIUOLO
O'dham Action News
chris.picciuolo@srbmic-nsn.gov

As O'dham Action News reported on April 20, the fate of Oak Flat, a site in Arizona's Tonto National Forest that is culturally significant to the San Carlos Apache Tribe, the O'dham and others, rests on the decision of a panel of 11 judges.

Now, foreign-owned mining corporation Resolution Copper, which wants to mine copper at the site, has told a federal court that it must be allowed to join the lawsuit on the side of the federal government, with a motion for limited lift of stay and to intervene.

Resolution Copper said it is entitled to intervene as of right under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure Rule 24(a)(2), which Resolution Copper said states its purpose "is to authorize, direct, facilitate, and expedite the exchange of land between Resolution Copper and the United States."

Apache Stronghold, the group that filed the lawsuit more than two years ago to stop the Forest Service from transferring Oak Flat to Resolution Copper, said in a response that the case has now proceeded extensively through a preliminary-injunction hearing with live witness testimony, repeated briefing on the merits (including 17 amicus briefs), substantive rulings on core legal issues, Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals briefing and oral argument, a Ninth Circuit decision, and a Ninth Circuit en banc rehearing, and yet Resolution "never once sought to intervene or file an amicus brief."

In the response, Apache Stronghold also argues that Resolution Copper waited 27 months after this case was filed, has offered no explanation for its delay, and has not rebutted the presumption that the government adequately represents its interests.

"There's a reason Resolution Copper is trying to jump into this case now, after sitting on the sidelines for two years," said Luke Goodrich, vice president and senior counsel at Becket, the law firm that represents Apache Stronghold. "It knows Apache Stronghold has strong legal arguments that could carry the day with the Ninth Circuit or with nine Justices, and it wants to have its say before it's too late."

Becket feels that the sudden intervention signals that the mining company is concerned about what might happen in the case, as the Supreme Court may have the last word on the protection of Oak Flat.

The law group initially said that a decision by the Ninth Circuit is expected later this spring or in early summer, however, on May 18, the U.S. Department of Justice (DOJ) sent a letter to the Ninth Circuit stating that the department has not yet identified a timeframe for completing its review.

"The Department is conducting a thorough review of the consultation record, and environmental and other associated documents, to ensure compliance with the applicable laws, regulations, and policies," the DOJ said in the letter.

The Salt River Police Department held a Peace Officers Memorial on the morning of Monday, May 15, to honor law enforcement officers who lost their lives in the line of duty. The SRPD's fallen officers, tribal officers and officers across the country were paid tribute during the morning's ceremony. The names of tribal peace officers from numerous reservations across Arizona who made the ultimate sacrifice were read.

The Salt River Fire Department's Pipes and Drums played "Amazing Grace" for SRPD Officer Clayton Townsend (End of Watch 01/08/2019) and SRPD Officer Jair Cabrera (End of Watch 05/24/2014). A white rose was laid in front of each fallen officer's photograph.

May 15 was Peace Officers Memorial Day, and May 14-20 was Police Week nationwide.

White roses were laid before the photographs of fallen officers Clayton Townsend and Jair Cabrera at the Peace Officer's Memorial Ceremony on May 15, 2023.

New Residential Treatment Facility Breaks Ground

JTR program staff, patients and graduates help break ground on new JTR project site on May 9.

Construction.

The three structures will share a central courtyard that includes a recreational yard for residents and staff. The new facility and surrounding area will be designed with environmental sustainability and the residents’ comfort in mind.

Paying homage to traditional structures, some areas will be covered to resemble vatos, which are traditional ramadas made of earthen materials like arrow weed, mesquite and saguaro cactus ribs. The project design is a balance of functionality and cultural heritage that will help Community members feel welcome.

Once in operation, the project will transition into a full-fledged treatment facility offering withdrawal management, residential management, crisis stabilization and a partial-hospitalization program. This includes individual and group counseling and services for non-residents who may receive follow-up treatment in an outpatient building.

Dr. Nate Velez, HHS practice administrator, talked about the work that went into making the JTR project possible. “I want to thank my team, everyone from the front of the office to our peers and our new on-boarding peers, techs and our therapists ... without our therapists, we couldn’t do this work,” said Velez.

Velez thanked the leadership team, supervisors and the staff that handle the day-to-day operations of assisting Community members with their treatment. He said the ability to carry out a plan that was conceptualized before his tenure with JTR is a blessing for the Community.

“We’ve come a long way, and when we talk about purpose, I think about the intention and meaning. We consider the purpose in the name of recovery, we think about what that means to many of our loved ones ... for the people of the Community, we have an opportunity to restore health and promote recovery.”

Later in the lineup of speakers, SRPMIC member and past JTR patient Timothy Largo offered his thoughts on the new project, adding that the JTR program helped give him the ability and courage to make the change to live a sober life.

“My silver day is May 13, 2022 ... another year coming in a few days. I couldn’t have done it without the grace of God,” said Largo. He talked about his recovery from detox to moving onto the JTR recovery program to get his life back on track.

“I am here today to celebrate the new Journey to Recovery,” said Largo. “This is the day we have been waiting for. Without this program, I would not be alive and standing here today to celebrate with you,” said Largo.

To conclude the morning’s events, SRPMIC leadership took up positions behind traditional O’odham digging sticks and turned over the loose dirt to officially break ground on the project. Then, staff and past patients of the JTR program took the sticks and turned the ground.

The new logo for the facility was chosen through an art contest that called for submissions from Community members. SRPMIC member Levi Johnson Sr. created the chosen design. It depicts two individuals on Red Mountain helping one another get to the top. It is a gesture symbolic of the Journey to Recovery mission.

Talking Stick Resort Amphitheatre Holds Ribbon Cutting

first of the year, but we haven’t been able to do a proper welcome,” he said. “We were so excited ... to find [a partner] like Talking Stick Resort and Casino Arizona, and the SRPMIC, that shares our passion for entertainment.”

The ceremony included a prayer by SRPMIC Council member Deanna Scabby. Also attending were SRPMIC Council member Cheryl Doka, Miss Salt River 2022-2023 Nani Reina, and Junior Miss Salt River 2022-2023 Tirsia Reina. Also speaking at the event was Casino Arizona and Talking Stick Resort Chief Marketing Officer Douglas Lima and SRPMIC Vice-President Ricardo Leonard.

“The outdoor setting [of the venue] pays homage to our people, who also entertained socially in what we call a vato (in O’odham), a ramada-style structure. Families would gather and sing, dance and share food, just as it will be done here,” said Leonard before singing a traditional song from the O’odham oriole bird series.

Guests at the venue will notice a variety of major new improvements to the concert experience, such as free-flowing new entry gates, curated food and beverage experiences, brand-new high-definition screens and a reimagined Casino Arizona VIP Lounge.

Traditional O’odham Plants: Desert Ephedra

BY CHRIS PICCIUOLO
O’odham Action News
chris.picciuolo@srpmic-nsn.gov

As more O’odham and Piipaash members of the Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community are going back to their roots and getting to know more about the traditional uses of the plants on the land, O’odham Action News spoke with community garden technician Amson Collins to help educate the Community about these plants.

In January 2022 we talked with Collins about reconnecting with desert plants, and we featured creosote (iivse in Piipaash and Segoi in O’odham), which grows naturally all over the Sonoran Desert.

This time we’re talking about the ephedra plant, which can be found in coarse soils near washes in O’odham communities and elsewhere throughout Arizona and the Southwest.

Ephedra Plant

Ephedra is a woody shrub with tall, green, leafless stems that contain varying amounts of caffeine and ephedrine, both of which act as stimulants on the central nervous system. The plant is mainly used for making a tea by steeping the stems.

According to the National Park Service, ephedra may have been commonly used by Mormon pioneers and Native Americans alike, resulting in its nicknames “Mormon tea” and “Indian tea,” among others.

The University of Arizona Campus Arboretum said that the harvest season for the plant is early spring.

According to the arboretum, ephedra traditionally has been used medicinally to treat a variety of illnesses and symptoms, including diabetes, pneumonia, kidney problems, venereal diseases and stomach issues. The stems have also been boiled and applied topically to wounds and sores.

About a half-dozen species of ephedra grow in the Sonoran Desert region, including Ephedra trifurca, Ephedra aspera and Ephedra viridis.

Harriett Reid, lead pharmacy technician and 2024 PharmD candidate at the River People Health Center, said that there are risks associated with plants used as traditional remedies.

SRPMIC garden technician Amson Collins holds a mason jar of tea made from desert ephedra found within the boundaries of the Community.

“Herbal medicines are not regulated by the [U.S. Food and Drug Administration], so there is a risk of numerous side effects and/or toxicities, including cardiovascular events and renal (kidney) or hepatic (liver) toxicities,” said Reid.

According to the National Institutes of Health National Center for Complementary and Integrative Health, you should not consume the plant if you are pregnant or breastfeeding.

A study published in Annals of Internal Medicine showed that ephedra products in general make up only 1% of herbal supplement sales in the U.S., but they are responsible for 62% of herb-related reports to poison control centers.

In February 2004, the FDA issued a final rule prohibiting the sale of dietary supplements containing ephedrine alkaloids (ephedra) because the supplements present an unreasonable risk of illness or injury.

Traditional O’odham Use of Ephedra

The most commonly known name for the plant in the Community is ku:pag in O’odham. Kelly Washington, director of the SRPMIC Cultural Resources Department, said that he doesn’t know many Piipaash who remember the name of the plant, but it’s something like iishiu or iishu in Piipaash.

Collins said that this particular plant is often mistaken for Chinese ephedra (Ephedra sinica), which is also known as “ma huang,” and while he said the local species is not nearly as harmful as Chinese ephedra, he agrees that people need to use precautions when taking any desert plant for medicinal use.

“Drying the plant weakens [the plant’s effects],” said Collins. “A lot of medicinal plants in the desert are too strong off the bat, and having too much of that can have the opposite effect. You want to [consume the ephedra plant] in moderation.”

Collins said that he learned to dry the fresh green ephedra sticks in a cool, dry place indoors for a week or two.

After boiling the stems, he pours the stems and tea into a jar, and he sweetens the tea with wild honey. He said the tea makes him feel good and wakes him up.

“The plant has collected all the water from the winter, and they have this nice, new green growth. I also use [ephedra] for [treating] hay fever, asthma and respiratory issues. It will dry you up,” said Collins.

Editor’s Note: This material is provided for informational purposes only and is not medical advice. Consumption of any ephedra plant or product is done at your own risk.
