Major League Baseball spring training is underway at Salt River Fields at Talking Stick, kicking off with opening day on February 25. Baseball fans filled the stadium to watch the Arizona Diamondbacks and Colorado Rockies take to the field for their first game of spring training.

Before the batters took to their boxes and the pitcher headed for the mound, Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community member Isabella Dockerty sang the national anthem while the colors were presented out on the field by members of American Legion Post 114 "Bushmasters."

Dockerty performed a resounding version of the national anthem in O'odham, which also paid homage to the Community's traditional language and service in the armed forces. The ceremonial first pitch was thrown by SRPMIC members Emily Andrews and Jacob Butler, Council representative, who were joined by SRPMIC Vice-President Ricardo Leonard.

Leonard said that he was aware of Andrews' athletic ability and thought it would be a great opportunity to invite her to throw the first pitch. "For a 12-year-old, she has a great arm and can really throw. It is always good to provide our youth the opportunity to be part of these things, which is often a rare occurrence," said Leonard.

Andrews and Butler both pitched their way to Arizona Diamondbacks shortstop Blaze Alexander and Colorado Rockies catcher Willie MacIver, who were posted behind home plate to make the catch.

Andrews was thankful that Leonard offered her the opportunity to throw out the

Traditional Form of O'odham Calendar Explored

On February 23, Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community members came out to Community Building to learn about calendar sticks. The SRPMIC Cultural Resources Department invited scholars Harry J. Winters Jr. and J. Andrew Darling to give a presentation on traditional Akimel O'odham and Tohono O'odham calendar sticks and how these artifacts record the history of the people.

The presentation centered on the Calendar Stick of Mehidaj and Benjamin Thompson, from District 5 (Casa Blanca) on the Gila River Indian Community. This calendar stick, which is housed in the collection of the Smithsonian National Museum of Natural History, holds important dates in O'odham history. Winters and Darling wrote a research article about this calendar stick that was published in the Spring 2022 issue of the Journal of the Southwest, published by the University of Arizona.

The O'odham from the Gila River Indian Community, the Tohono O'odham Nation, and the Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community used calendar sticks to record the story of the people. The sticks were 35 to 55 inches long and inscribed

Young River People's Council Attends Midyear UNITY Conference

Miguel, Asari Taylor-Lewis, Suzanna Waters and Isiah Wateuma.

YRPC Supervisor Janyse Salinas said that UNITY workshops provide a space and opportunity for youth to practice public speaking and problem-solving as individuals and for the Community.

"Another huge benefit is that youth are able to network with their peers who are from all over the country, which gives them insight and ideas on how others are tackling issues in their communities," said Salinas.

Youth Development Specialist Sommer Lopez said that the youth were able to group together with other Native youth from across the country to plan movements in their communities on subjects that mattered to them.

"When the youth got together, they found that even though some tribes were hundreds of miles apart, we still had similar experiences to share," said Lopez.

The group was able to listen to a session with cast and crew from the movie Prey, including actress Amber Midthunder (Assiniboine), producer Jhane Myers (Comanche) and casting director Angelique Midthunder. They discussed their experience in the film industry and how they got their start, and they noted some upcoming casting opportunities for the youth.

UNITY staff brought the four O'odham sibling tribes together to attend the conference, and the youth councils from each tribe coordinated with each other to decide what dance to perform. The Miss Salt River Community also provided guidance, and it was decided that the O'odham Cu:dk social dance would be performed.

YRPC Vice President Roman Judge was able to meet many people, mainly because the people involved in the social dance were very welcoming.

"[I learned] how to [work with] gourds and learned new traditional songs," said Judge.

Lopez was glad that the youth had this experience to use their voices positively.

"I especially enjoyed seeing our youth council share our O'odham culture with the basket dance and flower dance, along with many hours of social dancing and giveaway dances," said Lopez. "This is only the beginning of their journey of learning, and I look forward to bringing them to the annual UNITY conference in D.C.!"

The Annual National UNITY Conference will be held from June 30 to July 4.

The YRPC will continue to practice their traditional songs and dances and attend Community events. They are currently planning the morning walk for the upcoming Piipaash Matasheevm taking place on April 1.

Nike N7 Baseball Experience Focuses on Physical Activity for Community Youth

BY CHRIS PICCIUOLO
O'dham Action News
chris.picciuolo@srpmic-nsn.gov

Nike wrapped up its N7 Sports Experience camps at the Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community on February 18 with a baseball and softball clinic for youth from the SRPMIC, the Gila River Indian Community and the Ak-Chin Indian Community.

The clinics offered a chance for youth aged 7 to 17, of all genders and abilities, to attend sports camps with top national and local coaches.

The baseball clinic was held at the Salt River High School football and baseball fields and featured stations for the youth to learn a variety of baseball and physical activity skills.

After a quick warm-up, everyone gathered around the pitcher's mound to hear Ak-Chin Indian Community Chairman Robert Miguel talk about his experiences trying out with the Chicago Cubs and Cincinnati Reds.

Former MLB player Jacoby Ellsbury (Navajo/Colorado River Indian Tribes) was the special guest at the clinic.

"What [the event] is about is moving, learning a new sport, and being active," said Ellsbury. "I know this is a baseball and softball camp, but it's really encouraging youth to go out there and try all the sports and just have a fun time doing it. Childhood obesity is unfortunately becoming more and more prevalent, especially on Indian reservations with the Native youth."

Ak-Chin Indian Community Program Coordinator Wesley Gonzalez brought 16 youth to the event.

"We have a couple of youth who actually play baseball for some club teams or their school, so I know they're happy about being here," said Gonzalez.

Community member Madden Kisto, 16, participated in the event and said that it's always nice to come out and spend time with everyone at a big event like the N7 Sports Experience.

"We started off with batting practice; that was pretty fun," said Kisto. "Then we went to pitching, agility and diving for fly balls."

Gonzalez said, "It's important [for the youth to be at the event], especially because some of these kids know who Jacoby is. [When] they are able to be around him," the youth can see someone like them who has excelled in sports, which makes them believe that "we can make it, and now it's our turn."

Ak-Chin Indian Community Chairman Robert Miguel shares stories with the youth gathered at the pitcher's mound at the Nike N7 Baseball Experience.

In the concourse area of the ballpark, four SRPMIC artists set up to provide live demonstrations and engage with the game's spectators: Reann Brown and her mother Alice Manuel, both O'odham basket makers; Piipaash pottery maker Ron Carlos; and August Wood, an O'odham basket maker.

SRPMIC Girl Scouts Healthy King and Princess Event

BY CHRIS PICCIUOLO
O'odham Action News
chris.picciuolo@srpmic-nsn.gov

On March 7, 10 members of the Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community Girl Scout troop dressed up as their favorite Native or Disney royalty for the Healthy King and Princess event in collaboration with Health and Human Services (HHS), at the Salt River Recreation social suites.

Troop members brought a male role model or father figure with them for a night filled with fun and education about being a “healthy princess.”

Activities began with stretches, followed by a light dinner and the rotating of groups to experience different sessions.

The four sessions were: making a healthy snack (fruit “wands” and a smoothie with HHS Diabetes Services), designing princess frames with Girl Scouts leaders, healthy relationships by HHS Community Health Educator Vurlene Notsinneh-Bowekaty, and a photo station by Michael Schaaf.

“Everyone seemed to enjoy the company with one another by engaging with the crafts and music. Seeing the girls’ smiley faces as they left [for] home made it an enchanting event for all,” said Seraphania Gould, social program manager.

The SRPMIC Girl Scout troop was established in 1984-1985 by the Salt River Recreation Department, and the program has flourished to include 23 current members. The Girl Scouts are active in the Community from August through May, every first and third Tuesday.

The SRPMIC Girl Scout Mission is, “Girl Scouting builds girls of courage, confidence, and character, who make the world a better place.”

All healthy princesses and kings and staff that were present for the event pose for a group photo at sunset.

SRPMIC Girl Scouts healthy princesses and their healthy kings fathers, father figures, and male role models, participated in different sessions dedicated to keeping the scouts and their families healthy.

Major League Baseball Players Visit Community Elders

SRPMIC Elders had the chance to meet Colorado Rockies baseball players, during the annual senior breakfast on February 28. Top right: Elders were able to take a photo with the Rockies pitchers, which for a lucky few, won a signed baseball through a raffle drawing. Bottom: A Community elder shows her appreciation for the visit and wished the team well on their upcoming season.

Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community elders were treated to a surprise when four players from the Colorado Rockies stopped by to greet them during the monthly senior breakfast at the Lehi Community Building on February 28.

"Thank you for having us out here today," said Jim Kellogg, vice president of community and retail operations for the Rockies. Kellogg introduced Rockies pitchers Tyler Kinley, Antonio Senzatela, Riley Pint and Jake Bird to the elders.

The elders were invited to ask the players questions about anything from their morning routine to how they prepare for each game. The elders wanted to know what the players do to stay in shape, whether there are specific regimes they follow to stay competitive, and how being in the big leagues is different from the minor leagues.

Bird said that it is not easy to stay conditioned for each season; it takes a lot of time working out so players can be ready to play at a competitive level. Beyond all the preparation, he said he likes meeting the fans and the local community, because they are a big part of the team's support.

Pint said that pitchers need to find the time to stay active year-round and keep their arms ready for when it's time to get the ball and step onto the pitcher's mound. Even if it's a time of year when he's resting, "I'm still getting outside and still being active," said Pint.

He added that there is a very big difference between the minor and major leagues, which primarily has to do with the pace of the game and the length of time a team spends traveling from city to city, if it's a long stretch on the road.

After the question-and-answer session, the elders were called up in groups to go into an auxiliary room to have a group photo taken with the players. Some lucky individuals won an autographed baseball signed by the four Rockies players.

'Burritos for Dad' Brings Fathers Together

BY CHRIS PICCIUOLO
O'dham Action News
chris.picciuolo@srpmic-nsn.gov

This school year, the Salt River Early Childhood Education Center (ECEC) has held monthly Burritos for Dad events in partnership with the Salt River Life Enhancement and Resource Network (LEARN) Fatherhood Program.

The events are open to any male caregiver in a child's life—dads, grandfathers, uncles, adult older brothers and more.

Participants gather around a table and eat burritos from the Round House Café as they discuss their journeys as fathers and share advice and resources.

Robert Hickem, LEARN Social Worker II, said that it takes an entire village to raise a child.

"Having the fatherhood series to bring dads together does two things," said Hickem. "First, dads are finding out that their presence [in their child's life] is needed and wanted. Second, men can come to a safe space and have honest conversations on parenting, which is hard to find."

Family Involvement Specialist Carmen Briones said that, on average, about a dozen participants come to each Burritos for Dad event.

"Overall, our participants tell us they appreciate the consistency of the staff, the information and resources, spending time with friends, and the food."

Briones said that the history of Burritos for Dad is connected to the Community's Head Start program, which promotes volunteering and aims to engage fathers and father figures as advocates, lifelong educators and a child's first teacher.

"Through our Head Start program,

Dads and father figures gather around to discuss fatherhood and share stories about their struggles and triumphs as parents.

the ECEC has always prioritized the engagement of fathers and male caregivers through programming and activities," said Briones. "We also felt it was crucial to promote fatherhood engagement as families moved on [from the ECEC] to elementary school, so in 2012 we began working with the Salt River Fatherhood Program, which provides ongoing classes, support and resources wherever families are in their journey."

The final Burritos for Dad event of this school year will take place on Thursday, May 4, at the ECEC.

LEARN Fatherhood Program Classes

The LEARN Fatherhood Program classes for Native fathers of American Indian youth began on February 23 and are being held for 16 weeks at Social Services building 32.

Hickem said that the program provides skill building, education and activities designed to increase the individual's capacity to be an active, involved father and to create and maintain healthy relationships in all areas of life, including parenting.

"Education is provided on understanding what a healthy relationship is, communication skills, conflict resolution, how our childhood affects our decision-making ability now, parenting and much more," said Hickem.

For more information about the program, contact Robert Hickem at (480) 362-6336 or via email at Robert.Hickem@srpmic-nsn.gov.

Adult Learners Benefit From Computer Skills Class

CHRISTOPHER LOMAHQUAHU
O'odham Action News
Christopher.Lomahquahu@srpmic-nsn.gov

Adults interested in learning more about computers had the opportunity to accelerate their skills behind the keyboard with a series of classes in February. The Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community Recreation Services' (CRS) Leisure Education program held the classes on Tuesday evenings throughout February at the Way of Life Facility tribal library computer lab, concluding with the last session on February 28.

"This series of classes is geared towards adults. It's to help adults gain more computer skills they can apply to their day-to-day lives or in the workforce," said Melissa Rave, CRS program manager.

She said a total of nine adults and elders attended the series. "They're wanting to continually learn more about computers and their features," said Rave. With today's reliance on technology, the computer classes help older adults navigate email attachments, computer software and more.

Rave said, "I talked to one participant who was really interested in learning more about emails and attachment formats so that they could better communicate with their doctors via email and have documents provided to them via PDF."

The computer classes are part of a partnership between the Community and Scottsdale Community College, capitalizing on the close relationship between the two since the school is on tribal land. "They've been great to work with in offering non-credit classes, and that's why we aimed for four to six sessions to get [Community members] interested or as a skill builder," said Rave.

She said CRS will be offering classes on different topics each month throughout the year, with each lasting four weeks in the evenings. Rave said the computer skills class was one of two computer-related sessions happening at the WOLF during February; the other was a computer tech camp.

"Our tech camp actually went side by side with this computer class, providing adults an excellent opportunity to learn how to build your own laptop," said Rave. The camp took place one Saturday for five hours. "There were a few adults who signed up. They took apart a PC and put it back together, and they did the full plug-in and power-up."

Rave said Community members can check the WOLF Facebook page (www.facebook.com/SRPMIC.WOLF) and the SRPMIC website announcement page to get the latest information on future classes. Classes on dancing started on March 2; that will be followed by classes on creative writing during April.

Interested individuals can contact Melissa Rave at (480) 362-6696 or melissa.rave@srpmic-nsn.gov.

Parent Night Prepares Families for Summer Education Programs

Educators and parents discuss summer programs for Community students, during the parent night event at the SRPMIC Community Building.

Another aspect of the parent night, was for parents to explore ways their children can participate in activities to enrich their education.

CHRISTOPHER LOMAHQUAHU
O'odham Action News
Christopher.Lomahquahu@srpmic-nsn.gov

Parents gathered to meet with their student's educators and school officials at the Salt River Schools Parent Night on February 28. Parents with students in school from kindergarten to 12th grade met at the Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community Building to learn about educational opportunities available to their children this summer.

"The goal of Parent Night is to inform parents and guardians that there are resources out there for their students," said Miranda Johnson-Moya, Education Program manager for Salt River Schools. She said that it is important to make families aware of the different support systems that are available to their students.

The SRS staff discussed activities that will be available during summer break. Having that information early will help parents and guardians plan how their students will spend the summer, which could include participating in a program that enriches their personal and/or academic development.

Johnson-Moya said that for students transitioning to the next grade, for example from kindergarten to first grade or junior high to high school, resources exist that can help students finish their school year strong and prepare for the next step in their education.

"Every time we do these parent information nights, [we want the parents to] learn about the academic expectations their child will encounter in school."

At Parent Night, families sat down with their child's educator or a representative from SRS to discuss topics such as summer explorer programs, extra-credit opportunities based on independent learning, and summer school courses to get students up to speed on their academics.

The information supplied at Parent Night is helpful if students need to take summer school and they attend a school outside of the Community, for example in the Scottsdale Unified School District or Mesa Public Schools.

The information provided to the parents involves the registration process, fees for summer school and other options parents might consider beneficial to their children. "Especially for students coming from kindergarten, we want [parents] to know there's a timeline to have to their student's paperwork in," Johnson-Moya said.

One of the services offered to SRPMIC students is the Junior ACE program, which is a collaborative partnership with Scottsdale Community College. The program invites students in fifth through eighth grade to take part in college-level experiences.

Parents who were unable to attend Parent Night should keep an eye out for future opportunities to meet with SRS representatives.

The Repatriation Project Sheds Light on Remains Returned to Tribes

BY CHRIS PICCIUOLO
O'odham Action News
chris.picciuolo@srpmic-nsn.gov

The nonprofit investigative journalism outlet ProPublica recently released The Repatriation Project, a series dedicated to keeping track of the delayed return of Native American remains from America's institutions back to tribal nations.

According to the Native American Graves Protection and Repatriation Act (NAGPRA), repatriation means the return of possession or control of Native American cultural items to lineal descendants, culturally affiliated Indian tribes and Native Hawaiian organizations.

Under NAGPRA, when an institution establishes a connection between tribes and remains, it must publish a list of the tribes eligible to make a repatriation claim. The remains are then made available for return to the tribes.

The law does not require institutions to report when the remains have been physically returned to tribes.

The data gathered for the ProPublica series is accurate as of December 9, 2022, and is self-reported by institutions. The amount of unrepatriated Native American remains reported by institutions is a minimum estimate of individuals, and institutions frequently adjust these numbers when they re-inventory groups of remains, according to ProPublica.

Institutions in the State of Arizona

In Arizona, 20 institutions have reported possession of Native American remains from tribes across the country. The data shows that these institutions reported making available 67% of their more than 17,400 Native American remains for return to tribes under NAGPRA.

Topping the list of the amount of remains made available for return is the U.S. Department of Agriculture, which has made 4,675 available, or 97% of its holdings.

Institutions in the state that have made 100% of their remains available for return are the Arizona State Land Department, Cochise College, Northern Arizona University, the Pima County Office of the Medical Examiner, and the U.S. Department of Defense.

Institutions in the state that have made no remains available for return are Eastern Arizona College Foundation, Navajo County Coroner, Pima Community College Centre for Archaeological Field Training, Sharlot Hall Museum, Old Trails Museum and the Arizona State Capitol Museum.

Arizona Parks and Trails has a low percentage of return of remains, at 1%, with 191 reported not yet being made available for return.

The Arizona State Museum at the University of Arizona has made 44% of its remains available for return, for 1,914 total. The museum still has 2,470 remains that are not available for return.

Arizona State University (ASU) has the 25th largest collection of unrepatriated Native American remains in the U.S. The ASU School of Human Evolution and Social Change has made 12 remains available for return (2% total of what it has) and 786 unavailable for return.

ASU told O'odham Action News that while some higher institutions remain disengaged and unsupportive of the repatriation process, ASU is fully engaged in the repatriation process and is respectfully fulfilling the tenets of NAGPRA.

ASU provided the following statement:

"The Native American Graves Protection and Repatriation Act (NAGPRA) database accounts for all institutions with federal archaeological collections or institutions that have received federal funds. Our school is working, closely and directly, with tribal communities to respectfully and efficiently repatriate in a timely manner that is consistent with tribal concerns, current practices, and federal laws. As we engage in active consultation with tribal communities, confidentiality of information related to NAGPRA is of high concern for both ASU and tribal communities.

As we work closely with the tribes, we are taking the necessary steps to progress through the repatriation process at the appropriate pace. We remain respectful to the wishes of the tribes by limiting our public discussions of this sensitive topic, as advised by those tribes that we are directly engaged with.

For more information about NAGPRA, National NAGPRA or the NAGPRA Community of Practice may serve as useful points of reference for this important work."

Shane Anton, SRPMIC tribal historic preservation officer, said that the Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community Tribal Historic Preservation Office (THPO) "is aware of the ProPublica project and appreciates their effort to bring to light the lack of NAGPRA compliance in the 30 plus years since its enactment."

"I can't say that I've verified the numbers/percentages listed in that project, but I would like to express that the SRPMIC THPO has been working cooperatively with ASU for a few years now and the repatriation process is taking place," said Anton. "Most problematic issues regarding NAGPRA come from outside the state of Arizona."

Across the U.S., 10 institutions hold about half of the reported Native American remains that have not been made available for return to tribes.

The two institutions with the most remains not made available for return to tribes are the University of California Berkeley, with 9,075 total, and the Illinois State Museum, with 7,590 total.

Seeking Feedback for the New Senior Center

In 2021, the Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community (SRPMIC) Council approved through the capital improvement process the need to commence planning and design for a new Senior Center. Due to a growing population of seniors, programs have outgrown the current facility in Salt River. ECS and Senior Services Staff are seeking input on future needs and desire of the Community Members for what programs they would like to see in a new Senior Center. Staff seek feedback from Community Members for activities, amenities and where in the Community members would like to locate a new facility. A survey targeting responses from Community members forty-five (45) and older has been created and ready for responses.

The survey can be accessed online at:

<https://www.surveymonkey.com/r/TXY797W>, QR code or over the phone by calling Angela Zubko, ECS at 480-362-3191.

The survey will also be mailed to everyone forty-five (45) or older living in the Community and available for pick-up at the senior breakfasts and senior center. Please return the filled out survey to one of the following locations:

Traditional Form of O’odham Calendar Explored

with notches and symbols to denote years and notable events of history in the region. They could be made from a willow branch, a pine branch or saguaro cactus ribs.

According to Winters and Darling, calendar sticks followed the O’odham new year, which begins in July and ends the following June. Each new notch signified a new year, and there were 1 to 2 inches of spacing between each notch where figures, dots, designs, colors and shapes would be made by the stick holder relating to their observations and memories of tribal events that year. Eventually, the one who made the stick would be able to recite important events in tribal history from memory.

The calendar stick would be passed down to a male member of the family, who would carry on the role of inscribing events on the stick. If the calendar stick could not be passed to a male relative, it would be destroyed (most likely broken into pieces) and then buried with the deceased owner. Darling said that according to a report by anthropologist Dr. Frank Russell on the Pima Indians for the Bureau of American Ethnology, published posthumously in 1908 (Russell died in 1903), one calendar stick belonging to a stick holder was lost, so he resorted to recording the tribe’s stories with pencil and paper. Russell was an anthropologist and ethnologist working among the Akimel O’odham of the Gila River Indian Community from 1901 to 1903, and he documented the Calendar Stick of Mehidaj and Benjamin Thompson.

In particular, the Calendar Stick of Mehidaj and Benjamin Thompson is significant because it documents events ranging from about 1842 to 1892. Little is known about Mehidaj, who is briefly described in small notations in one of Russell’s typescripts that mentions the name Mehidaj (meaning “burnt remains”—of something or someone).

According to Russell’s typescript, Mehidaj passed his calendar stick on to Benjamin Thompson, who continued to document events, such as skirmishes and battles with Apache and Yavapai raiders, tribes who were frequently at odds with the O’odham. Mehidaj may have possessed the calendar stick for 59 years, and Thompson had the stick for 14 years prior to meeting Russell.

Throughout Russell’s 1901-1902 fieldwork in central Arizona as an employee of the Bureau of American Ethnology, at least four calendar sticks were studied, translated and documented. These calendar sticks were made by Juan Thomas of Blackwater (District 1), Benjamin Thomas of Casa Blanca (District 5), and Joseph Head (Ko’oi Mo’o—Rattlesnake Head) and Chukud Naak (Owl Ear), both from Gila Crossing (District 6). It was noted that Owl Ear would later move to the SRPMIC.

Of the three calendar sticks, the Casa Blanca stick is the only original, while the two others that are from GRIC are copies, currently in the Smithsonian collection, while the Chukud Naak stick is in the collection of the Arizona Museum of Natural History, according to Darling and Winters. Later, in 1920, the original Gila Crossing stick came into the possession of an Edward Davis, a “collector” of artifacts, and it later found its way to the National Museum of the American Indian in Washington, D.C.

Place names associated with the Benjamin Thompson calendar stick include Chuchk Daadk (Black Noses), an area near the Rillito cement plant between Tucson and Marana. The O’odham name describes several low-lying hills from the Tucson Mountains that are a dark earthen color.

Throughout the presentation, Darling and Winters provided an overview of several events marked on the Thompson calendar stick. The range of history it documents geographically records a footprint that extends from east of Miami, Arizona (near Globe) to Queen Creek, Tucson, Cave Creek and the Verde River.

In one recorded event, Apache ambushed the O’odham near Chuchk Daadk. The O’odham would refer to the Apache as oob (enemy). The name oob is a common word associated with both the Apache and Yavapai and appears in historical accounts to describe the parties involved.

Another incident documents the capturing of an Apache cattle thief at the hands of the Akimel O’odham on the Gila River Indian Community around 1845 to 1846. Later, the captured Apache would be dispatched by women with sticks, after a period of dancing and singing connected to the series of events.

The encounter took place in an area between District 4 (Gila Butte) and District 5 (Casa Blanca) called Aji Mountain. Westbound travelers on Interstate 10 can see the mountain to their right, which is divided into two buttes called Bibjulik and Aji, situated in a north to south direction.

Russell describes another translated account from the calendar stick in the Mazatzal and Superstition Mountains. This area was a territory associated with the Apache and bands of Yavapais, along with the O’odham.

Around 1860 to 1861, O’odham and their white compatriots fought a group of Apaches, which resulted in two mortally wounded O’odham warriors and an unknown count on the Apache side. In Russell’s later translations, the Four Peaks area was the site of many battles relating to either the Apache or Yavapai tribes.

Darling and Winters did their best to describe the stories and places associated with the calendar stick and how they are associated with present-day GRIC, SRPMIC, the Tohono O’odham Nation, and the Yavapai and Apache people. Some stories also involve the western edge of O’odham territory, dealing with the Piiapaash (Maricopa) and Yuman tribes.

Community members thank the presenters after the presentation on O’odham calendar sticks.

Minerals to Materials

How Cement is Made

Quarry

The Clarkdale Plant is surrounded by hills that are rich with high quality limestone that is quarried on site. The quarried rock contains both silica and calcium as well as deposits of volcanic material that provide alumina, iron and additional silica. All of these are necessary to make a suitable raw mix for cement.

Crush

Once quarried, the stone is trucked to the primary crusher where each type of stone is broken down and stored separately. In a secondary crusher, the stones are mixed in the correct proportion and reduced to less than 3-inch sized pieces. During this process, the rock is sampled regularly for quality. After the crushing process, this raw material is stacked.

Reclaimer

A special piece of large equipment, a digger-wheel reclaimer, retrieves the stacked rock to ensure that different types of rock are blended into a uniform feed for the kilns.

Raw Grind

The raw material is ground into a fine powder called raw feed that is sampled for chemical consistency and quality.

Heat

Raw feed is blended in the homogenizing silos and pumped into a preheater/calciner. The feed then drops into a rotary kiln where it is heated to temperatures of at least 2750 degrees F. At these high temperatures, lime, silica, alumina, magnesia and iron oxides form new compounds and produce small, hard, spherical shaped “clinker.”

Finish Grinding Mill

The clinker is cooled and stored in domes. Gypsum is added to the clinker and it is milled to a powder. The powder is cement.

Storage

Portland cement, mortar cements, and specialty grinds are pumped into storage silos on site.

Packed & Distributed

Bulk and bagged cement is distributed throughout central and northern Arizona. The location of the Clarkdale plant near the center of the state is convenient to the growing metropolitan area making concrete readily accessible and construction more affordable.

A few of the projects built with Phoenix Cement® include Glen Canyon Dam, the Central Arizona Project, Chase Field, Roosevelt Dam, I-10 and I-17 construction, Phoenix Sky Harbor International Airport, The Pavillions Shopping Center, Mingus Union High School, the Palo Verde Nuclear Generating Station, numerous high rise structures and housing developments throughout the Phoenix metropolitan area and Northern Arizona.
