It was time to officially turn the tassels. The Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community once again hosted the American Indian Convocation at Salt River Fields for all Indigenous students graduating from the Maricopa County Community College District. The convocation took place at Salt River Fields at Talking Stick.

The district schools are Chandler-Gilbert Community College, Estrella Mountain Community College, GateWay Community College, Glendale Community College, Mesa Community College, Paradise Valley Community College, Phoenix College, Rio Salado College, Scottsdale Community College and South Mountain Community College.

In 2025, the community college district was forced to cancel its convocation ceremonies due to federal funding cuts. Thankfully, the SRPMIC stepped up to host the inaugural convocation.

This year, the SRPMIC, Ak-Chin Indian Community, Gila River Indian Community and Tohono O'dham Nation collaborated to help celebrate Indigenous graduates on May 13.

Sixty-plus students participated in the ceremony, which saw many graduates dressed who plan, design, build, manage and maintain the infrastructure that supports quality of life in communities across the United States. "In May, National Public Works Week is celebrated, which recognizes the men and women that work for public works organizations throughout the United States to celebrate the services we provide," said SRPMIC Public Works Director Joshua Sciacca.

This year's theme is "Rooted in Service, Powered by Community," chosen by the American Public Works Association (APWA), which sponsors National Public Works Week as part of its public awareness and education activities. According to the APWA, the chosen theme "reminds us that public works professionals are motivated to serve the communities that they love and that power them to always do their best."

SRPMIC Public Works Customer Service Administrator Crystal Leonard said, "I think [the theme] is very on point for Salt River because we are rooted in the Salt River Community. I think this is a good time for us to sit back and show appreciation for one another and our appreciation for the Community."

SRPMIC Public Works has several divisions: Administration, Community Services, Facilities, Utilities and Roads. The department has more than 350 staff members who work daily to keep vital services running. Sciacca said, "I am extremely humbled and proud of the work [the Public Works Department] does day in and day out. They always have a Community mindset, and they are proud of the work that they do."

During Sciacca's time with Public Works, he said, he has felt like it's a family. "We all know each other, and everyone's got everyone's back. We work together!"

WellPath Awarded Platinum Recognition from American Heart Association

BY CHRIS PICCIUOLO
O'odham Action News
chris.picciuolo@srpmic-nsn.gov

The American Heart Association, a nonprofit organization dedicated to fighting heart disease and stroke, awarded the Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community's WellPath program with its platinum-level recognition for reaching high scores on its 2026 Well-being Works Better Scorecard.

WellPath is a health and well-being program offered by the SRPMIC that is tailored to the health and wellness needs of those enrolled in the SRPMIC Employee Health Care Plan.

"At the heart of every thriving organization is a workforce that feels valued and supported," said American Heart Association CEO Nancy Brown. "We're honored to recognize the Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community, which has made employee well-being a cornerstone of their culture through the Well-being Works Better Scorecard."

The AHA said in a statement:

"Included in SRPMIC's Mission and Vision is to create a leadership that cares for employee welfare and accountability, and a Healthy Community in mind, body and spirit. The WellPath Wellness Program is an expression of this vision using a holistic view of wellness to provide programming which improves wellness and reduces costs of illness. In WellPath's 15th year, the American Heart Association bestows its highest recognition for workplace well-being and for outstanding commitment to creating a workplace culture where health and well-

3 Takeaways:

- The American Heart Association awarded the SRPMIC WellPath program its highest level of recognition (platinum) based on the AHA's 2026 Well-being Works Better Scorecard.
- WellPath exceeded the benchmark scores for all categories measured by the scorecard.
- Organizations can earn a recognition levels of completer, bronze, silver, gold or platinum.

being are prioritized and every employee is empowered to reach their full potential."

According to the AHA, the Well-being Works Better Scorecard helps assess WellPath's health and well-being strategy based on its adherence to the AHA's recommended practices. Organizations can earn a recognition levels of completer, bronze, silver, gold or platinum.

SRPMIC Wellness Program Supervisor Andrew Weiler told O'odham Action News that WellPath is proud to have received the highest recognition from the AHA, noting the organization's credibility.

"WellPath's scores can be benchmarked against other wellness programs completing the scorecard," said Weiler.

"So, even though WellPath reached platinum status, we can continue to look at our scores and compare against other wellness programs to continue to develop and improve. WellPath wants to reflect the Community's commitment to employees and to provide programming to help SRPMIC follow the stated vision and mission."

WellPath exceeded the benchmark scores for all categories measured by the scorecard.

"WellPath is evidence-based and data-driven, so it was gratifying to see that WellPath received all the points for reporting outcomes, exceeding the benchmark score by 4 points, and for programs and interventions, exceeding the benchmark score by 6 points," said Weiler.

Greater Chaco Cultural Landscape Named Among Most Endangered Places

The ancestral homeland of Pueblo people in northwestern New Mexico is among the country's 11 most endangered historic places.

The National Trust for Historic Preservation released the list in May, and it includes the Greater Chaco Cultural Landscape. The area stretches beyond New Mexico into Arizona, Colorado and Utah. It's also home to the federal Chaco Culture National Historical Park. The park is a UNESCO World Heritage Site.

The area is also sacred to the Hopi people. Pueblo and Hopi people have worked for years to stop mineral extraction there.

Pascua Yaqui Tribe Official Wins Lifetime Award

Pascua Yaqui Tribe Vice-Chairman Peter Yucupicio received the Lifetime Leadership Award from the Tribal Leadership Council.

He was recognized for his more than 20 years of service to his tribe. Three other Indigenous leaders were also recognized.

The awards were presented on June 3 at the Tribal Leadership Conference at Wild Horse Pass in Chandler.

Indigenous Tourism Association Call for Nominations

The submission deadline for the American Indigenous Tourism Association's annual Excellence in Indigenous Tourism Awards nominations is July 17.

These awards celebrate achievements in travel and cultural tourism across nine categories, which include Destination of the Year and Artisan of the Year.

The 2026 recipients will be formally honored as part of the 28th Annual American Indigenous Tourism Conference scheduled for October in Tulalip, Washington.

Additional details can be found on the association's website.

Indigenous Hockey Player Wins Championship

An Anishinaabe hockey player helped lead her team to the Professional Women's Hockey League championship in May.

Abby Roque is from the Wahnapiitae First Nation in Ontario, Canada, and played a key role in the Montreal Victoire's first PWHL championship. The team beat the host Ottawa Charge 4-0 in front of 12,362 fans at Canadian Tire Centre. Montreal is the first Canadian team to win the Walter Cup.

Roque scored twice and finished the playoffs tied for the postseason scoring lead. Roque was born in the United States and has played for Team USA during international competitions.

Another Indigenous player competed in the game. Jocelyne Larocque is Red River Métis and plays for the Charge.

in their traditional regalia. The SRPMIC was well represented as several Community-member graduates participated.

Melody Lewis (Fort Mojave Indian Tribe) served as the mistress of ceremonies for the event. "This moment represents more than academic success; it reflects sacrifice, support, identity and the enduring strength of our community," she said.

Drum group Comanche Red shared a song as part of the welcoming blessing and Miss Indian Arizona Sialik King performed the national anthem.

After her performance, Tohono O'odham Chairman Verlon Jose sang "The Honor Song" and provided a few words. In his remarks, Jose offered his congratulations to the graduates and their families. He added, "I do want to also acknowledge the O'odham tribes, [SRPMIC] President [Martin] Harvier and his administration, because together we are stronger. When this happened and they called the O'odham leaders together, we united, for you, the people."

The convocation keynote speaker was Jacob Moore, associate vice-president of tribal relations at Arizona State University. From the Tohono O'odham Nation, Moore expressed gratitude for being selected.

"It's good to be here with my relatives," began Moore. During his speech, Moore described how he turned his life around after first being academically ineligible when he began his college career.

"Your path doesn't have to be straight," he said. "As you probably already know, confidence builds with every small victory and every step, one at a time. A strong foundation matters when it comes to academics and pursuing goals and dreams. Having a support system with those around you changes lives in a good way."

South Mountain Community College graduate Rigoberto Tavena (Pascua Yaqui Tribe) served as one of the three featured student speakers. "Choosing college wasn't always clear for me. I faced moments of doubt. There were times where I questioned whether I should be here or not. Because when you're from south Phoenix [like I am], college can be a step into the unknown. But my Yaqui culture guided me. I'm not here by accident," he said.

Graduates were celebrated during the American Indian convocation held at Salt River Fields.

Following Tavena's words, Mesa Community College graduate Nizhoni Shandin Smith (Diné) also expressed key insights from her academic journey thus far. "Back in the early 2000s, my mother enrolled at Mesa Community College. I figured, maybe being a second-generation Thunderbird would not hurt after all," she said. "At first, it was a difficult pill to swallow. But my mother told me, 'We are all living this life for the first time and mistakes are inevitable.' Those words reminded me that changing direction is not failure, it is growth."

The third and final student graduate speaker was James Schaaf, a Community-member graduate of Scottsdale Community College. He spoke from the heart at the lectern while his parents, Yvonne and Michael, proudly watched him with tears of joy. "Having such a strong support system of family and friends made me grateful for the opportunity of having these people in my life and giving me confidence on my journey," he said.

His speech highlighted how valuable his grandmother, Patricia King, is to him because of the O'odham traditions and values she provided to him while he was growing up. Schaaf will continue his education at Arizona State University.

Later, the SRPMIC performance group Bird Singing and Dancing by the River sang three songs which called for the blessings to the graduates, their families and loved ones.

Each graduate received a shell necklace when their name and degree were announced. Candace Hamana (Hopi/Navajo), director of tribal relations at Arizona State University, read aloud the names one by one. Tribal leaders, distinguished guests and Indian Country representatives all created a receiving line near home plate to congratulate each graduate.

Once back in their seats behind home plate, the students were instructed to turn their tassels over to the left side, signifying that they have completed a milestone achievement, graduating from college.

The night was capped off with a fireworks show, with many families taking group photos in different locations around Salt River Fields.

This year's event proved that though there may be uncertain times happening throughout the United States, here in the SRPMIC and in Indian Country, tribal officials and leaders do their best to ensure that future leaders are supported and recognized for their hard work and achievements in and out of the classroom.

SRPMIC Breaks Ground on Café Conference Center

BY DALTON WALKER
O'odham Action News
dalton.walker@srpmic-nsn.gov

The River People Health Center's campus on the southern edge of the Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community will have a new place to grab a hot drink and a bite to eat, perhaps as soon as late next year.

A short ceremony took place May 19 on the campus' south side to break ground on a café conference center. The new 22,423-square-foot building will sit just south of the health center near the outdoor walking track, east of Journey to Recovery. It is scheduled to open in about 18 months.

The building will have a café and cafeteria with features similar to the Round House Café at Two Waters. It will be operated by Aramark. The building will also house three conference rooms, office space and a teaching kitchen. The largest conference room has space to hold 100 to 120 people, with the flexibility to open into the cafeteria's space. The other two conference rooms will have space for 12 seats and 20 seats, respectively.

SRPMIC Health and Human Services Director Joe Remitera counted down the days until the groundbreaking and will likely continue to count down until the opening. At the groundbreaking, he thanked SRPMIC leadership, tribal government staff and all the others who have contributed to the project.

"I've been waiting for this day for four years, four days and eight minutes—because that's when we opened up the River People Health Center, and from that time, I've been asked when we will build a cafeteria," he said. "I'm happy to say that we are building it now, so this is a very significant day for us."

The groundbreaking included a traditional song and blessing. SRPMIC President Martin Harvier also shared a few words.

SmithGroup, the Phoenix architectural design company that designed the River People Health Center and won awards for its effort, also designed the new building.

Kennise McGertt remains focused on her goals as she continues to etch her name into the record books one performance at a time.

sical performances. Oasis Ensembles was founded in 2016 when the organization was a small Winter Guard team based out of Mesa High School. Over time, Oasis Ensembles has grown and expanded its community outreach to include the entertainment ensemble DareVite Entertainment Group, in addition to hosting several classes and training programs, like summer spin, the trainee program and superstition dance.

The ensemble collective houses three specific groups of performers: the World Team, National A Team and Local A Team.

Last September, McGertt auditioned and was selected to join the Oasis Ensembles World Team. The prestigious performance collective currently lists McGertt on their 2026 cast member roster on their website.

The audition process was fierce, but McGertt rose to the occasion, an attribute she has shown time after time, whether in and out of the classroom or now on the stage.

Spinning into History

"This is my first year being on Oasis Ensemble," McGertt said. "I decided to audition because I wanted to start spinning again."

With nearly a decade of performing experience, McGertt expressed how she experienced moments of stress and nervousness at the beginning of her career when she was a freshman in high school. However, when her big brother Bryce taught her tips and tricks on how to successfully perform a routine, that proved to be a crucial turning point for her.

"With [him helping me], he helped me find my confidence in spinning," she said.

She continued, "When I was 19, I was on the Oasis A Class. Now being 21 on the World Team, it was a big stepping stone," she said. Her audition for the World Team was a two-day process, she said.

McGertt said that it was the support of her family that helped ease her mind and helped her understand and refine her talents during that time. "I didn't know if I was going to catch on fast enough. But, hearing encouraging words from my family telling me, 'You were born for this' and 'You're okay,' that really helped me," said McGertt with a smile.

The World Team practices for most of the day on Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays, putting in more than 30 hours of training over those three days. McGertt said she was able to juggle the long hours of practice by learning that "[Performing] is more of mental game, instead of a physical one. Having to be locked in during rehearsals is a need."

Those long hours of rehearsal, combined with her motivation and drive to succeed, were well on display in March when her Oasis World Team won the 2026 Winter Guard Arizona State Championship.

What was the first thought she had when it was announced that her team had won the state title? A shock, followed by validation. "It took my breath away," she admitted. "Just the amount of hard work we put in, it was very rewarding to win." In fact, McGertt's team didn't only win the state championship, they etched their names into the history books too, as it was the first time Oasis Ensemble had ever won a state title.

"Our show was called 'Live, Breathe, Meditate.' Our show that we put out there was to replicate what goes on in our brains," she said.

However, heavy is the head that wears the crown. The day after winning the first-ever state championship, McGertt and her team went to practice, reviewing film and learning how they could get better.

The winning ways continued the following month as well.

Traveling to Dayton, Ohio, in April, McGertt and her team performed at the Winter Guard International World Championship. "It was 30 or 40 degrees there. Everyone told me there, 'It's so nice outside,' but I was freezing."

Her mom Sonya and brother joined her in Dayton, supporting her along the way as her team advanced to the semifinals in the World Class division, another first for the ensemble group.

So, what's next for McGertt? More performances, more routines, as well as potentially auditioning for two out-of-state ensemble teams.

"I want to go out to California," she said. "There is a team out in San Diego called Vox Artium. I really enjoy their shows. One of my dreams is to go and audition for them. I just want to experience what their teaching is like. That's the biggest thing for me, learning from different people."

McGertt said that there is also a performance group in New Jersey that she would like to audition for.

With the world still at her fingertips, McGertt remains committed to her goals as she works on turning her dreams into reality.

What would she say to those looking to start working toward accomplishing their dreams like she has? "Don't limit yourself," she said. "As long as you know what you want, go chase it. Your family will also be your biggest supporters."

For more information related to upcoming Oasis Ensemble performances, check out their website at www.oasisensembles.org/winterguard.

Community member Angelina Montoya is also headed to Park University. Both have played side by side for years and will continue to do so as they enter this new journey.

Jones and Montoya have been sharing the spotlight on the basketball court since 2018 at Westwood High in Mesa. Together, they pushed each other to play better and, with shared motivation, had exceptional high school careers.

"We have been playing basketball together since 2018," Jones said. One memory that stands out to her is "when I scored 1,000 points and she (Montoya) was jumping around before the shot went in."

Most recently, Jones and Montoya played together at Scottsdale Community College. Jones also played at South Mountain Community College in Phoenix.

"Our chemistry on the court is unspoken connection, anticipating each other's moves. We have each other's back, celebrating wins and pushing through rough losses together," Jones said.

After a long history of basketball, both are finally back on the court as a dynamic duo, with their season set to start later this year.

"I'm most looking forward to pushing my limits, learning and growing from challenges in this new chapter," she added.

Community Garden Debuts New Chicken Coop

3 Takeaways:

- The new chicken coop was built over an existing structure in the Community Garden.
- Garden staff members look forward to providing eggs to elders or children as a demonstration project.
- While not an O'odham tradition, raising chickens is a modern tradition practiced by Community-member elders.

ABOVE: Three of the chickens at the Salt River Community Garden stand inside of the new chicken coop built over an existing structure. SRPMIC Engineering and Construction Services built the coop.

To get the ball rolling on a new structure, Community Garden Coordinator Stetson Mendoza reached out to SRPMIC Engineering and Construction Services, who provided the labor to put the new structure in place to house the chickens.

Sadly, during Easter weekend in April, either dogs or coyotes found a way inside the coop and enjoyed a big chicken dinner.

"They ripped the cage back and got into the coop. There were chickens here and there all over the garden, so [the dogs] must have had a good time chasing [the chickens] around," said Butler.

The wire around the coop has since been reinforced.

Upon entering the coop's swing door, you'll step on fresh straw, which helps the chickens to nest and keep cool. There are also 10-foot, two-level nesting areas on both sides.

Garden staff provide the chickens with fresh water and chicken feed, which is a pellet mixture of grain and corn. Butler explained his routine with the chickens.

"You've got to come and check on them. You've got to make sure that their feeder is filled with water," said Butler. "I always get an extra pan of water so that they can walk in it, sit in it or drink it."

Mendoza keeps pigs at his own residence and has brought them to the garden for educational purposes. Most recently, the pigs were featured alongside the chickens during an Early Childhood Education Center visit to the garden.

I Have a Will – Do I Also Need a Trust?

Dear Savvy Senior,

My wife and I were recently talking about updating our will and wondered if we should also set up a trust. How do we know if we need one?

--Planning Ahead

Dear Planning,

That's an excellent question. A will is one of the most important tools in estate planning, but many people wonder if it's enough, or if adding a trust makes sense. The answer depends on your finances, your family situation, and what you want your plan to accomplish. Here's a simple way to think about it.

A will spells out who gets your assets after you pass away. It also names an executor to carry out your wishes and can designate a guardian for minor children.

The downside is that a will must go through probate, which is the court process that validates it and oversees distribution. Probate can take months and, in many states, becomes part of the public record.

A trust works a little differently. A revocable living trust holds your assets during your lifetime and directs how they'll be distributed after your death, without going through probate. Unlike a will, it stays private and lets a successor trustee step in immediately if you can't manage your finances, which is useful in cases of illness, injury, or dementia.

Trusts can also help with complicated family situations, like blended families or children with special needs, giving you more control over who gets what and when.

The biggest challenge is that you have to move your accounts and property into the trust yourself, which takes time and care. Most people who create a trust also keep a simple "pour-over will" to catch anything that wasn't transferred.

Because trusts are more complex, they usually cost more than a will. Attorneys typically charge $1,000 to $3,000 for a trust versus $300 to $1,200 for a will, although costs vary depending on the estate and location. You can use do-it-yourself options like Quicken WillMaker & Trust, Trust & Will or LegalZoom to save money, but they're generally best for simple situations. If your finances or family circumstances are more complicated, hiring an attorney is usually worth the cost.

You might benefit from a trust if you own real estate – especially in more than one state – want to avoid the costs and delays of probate or prefer to keep your estate matters private. It's also helpful if you have a larger estate, a blended family, or want to ensure someone can manage your finances if you become incapacitated.

If your estate is relatively small, your family situation is simple, and most of your assets already have named beneficiaries – like life insurance, IRAs, or bank accounts with pay-on-death or transfer-on-death designations – a will may be all you need. Some states also offer simplified probate for small estates, which can make the process quicker and cheaper.

You don't need a trust just because you have a will. But if avoiding probate, protecting privacy, or managing assets during incapacity is important to you, a trust is worth considering. Even a modest estate can benefit from a clear plan.

If you don't already have an attorney, a good estate-planning professional can help figure out what's right for you. Two trusted resources are the National Academy of Elder Law Attorneys (naela.org) and the National Association of Estate Planners and Councils (naepc.org), both of which let you search for local professionals. Taking the time to put a plan in place, whether it's a will, a trust, or both, can protect your loved ones, ease stress, and give you peace of mind now and in the future.

Send your questions or comments to questions@savvysenior.org, or to Savvy Senior, P.O. Box 5443, Norman, OK 73070.

National Day of Prayer Gathering Held in Salt River

BY JUAN YSAGUIRRE
O'odham Action News
juan.ysaguirre@srpmic-nsn.gov

This year, the National Day of Prayer recognized its 75th year, with the first event taking place in 1951. This year's observance was held on May 7, and the theme was "Glorify God Among the Nations, Seeking Him in All Generations."

The official verse for this year was "Tell of His glory among the nations, His wonderful deeds among all the peoples." 1 Chronicles 16:24.

Locally, the Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community held a gathering on May 7 in the Two Waters Courtyard. The gathering saw SRPMIC President Martin Harvier welcoming all.

The featured speakers were John Kingsley, Sandra Brandt, Pastor John Austin from Salt River Church of Christ, Tom Largo Sr., Pima Christian Fellowship Pastor Marty Thomas, Pastor Len Andrews, SRPMIC Council member Michael Dallas Sr., Lehi Church of the Nazarene Pastor Merrill Jones, Gilbert Garza Jr. from Victory Outreach Church of Mesa and Salt River Assembly of God Pastor WinterElk Valencia.

The distinguished speakers led special prayers for families; the incarcerated; churches; members of the military; police, fire and medical professionals; and national, state and tribal governments. There also were prayers for the youth, elders and the Community.

The well-attended morning gathering proved that many individuals and families here in the Community look toward the Lord for continued guidance and teachings during times of amplified uncertainty and strife.

Community Holds Peace Officer Memorial

BY KATERINA THOMAS
Community Relations Office

Members of the Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community gathered in the Two Waters Courtyard on the morning of May 21 to remember and honor fallen Salt River Police Department Officer Clayton Townsend (End of Watch, Jan. 8, 2019) and Officer Jair Cabrera (End of Watch, May 24, 2014).

The program was led by Sergeant Orlando Calzadillas as the morning sun shined upon the uniformed personnel lined up facing the stage. The SRPD Honor Guard posted the colors, and the national anthem was performed by Sandra Brandt. A moment of silence was observed to show respect for and mourn the brave officers who lost their lives in the line of duty while protecting the Community.

The morning was filled with prayers for the officers. First, the Peace Officer's Prayer was recited by Commander Alejandro McDaniel, followed by a prayer from SRPMIC President Martin Harvier.

SRPD Chief Walter Holloway shared encouraging words: "As we honor them today, let us do more than remember—let us live in a way that reflects the values they stood for. Let us support one another, serve with purpose and remain committed to the ideals that guided them. Though their watch has ended, their impact endures, in the communities they safeguarded and in the example they set for all of us."

The Salt River Fire Department played "Amazing Grace" on the bagpipes, and SRPD Honor Guard Officer Edimar Quintana played the ceremonial Taps. The memorial concluded with SRPMIC Vice-President Ricardo Leonard singing a traditional honor song and some closing remarks from Holloway.

The U.S. flag flies high from the ladder of a firetruck in honor of fallen heroes.

Sgt. Orlando Calzadillas led the program during the Peace Officer's Memorial Ceremony.

The Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community wants your input on transportation safety!

The Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community (SRPMIC) is updating the Tribal Transportation Safety Plan (TTSP) to reduce, and eventually eliminate, life-altering crashes within the Community. The goal of the TTSP is to identify and implement transportation safety solutions that create a safer, more comfortable transportation network for all Community members.

The TTSP will:

- 📋 Assess previous strategies to identify refinements that will help prevent future fatalities and serious injuries
- 📍 Establish emphasis areas to guide the development of effective crash countermeasures
- 🗣️ Recommend high-priority projects that are informed by feedback from Community members
